DEFIANT WORKER SET AFIRE

PORT COLBORNE, Ont. (CP) — A union machinst who did not participate with members of the United Steelworkers of America in the national work stoppage Oct. 14 was set on fire Wednesday during a coffee break, police said Friday.

Victor Zacharjasz, 35, employed by Barber Hydraulic Turbine, was in hospital Friday with severe burns suffered when someone put a rag in his back pocket and set it on fire, police said.

Union officials were not available for comment.

Zacharjasz said in an interview a fellow worker threatened Oct. 15 to put him in hospital because he had stayed on the job during the protest. Nothing happened until Wednesday, he said.

Zacharjasz said he had been cleaning machines and his clothes were smeared with inflammable cleaning fluid when he was set on fire.

Burning Bomb Snuffed In Vancouver Eaton's

VANCOUVER (CP) — An Eaton's business office employee foiled an apparent bomb plot in the large downtown store Friday night — and all because the lights went out in his office.

The employee, Fred Cackette, was puzzled when the light failed. He went to a fifth floor electrical switch room to investigate and found what appeared to be a bomb with a burning fuse.

Police said he stomped it out and raised an immediate alarm.

Within minutes, store authorites evacuated the building of shoppers and staff.

Police believe the bomb scare was probably created by someone who was angry at the store.

Insp. Doug Westover discounted an earlier theory that four incendiary bombs found on the fifth floor of the store were a diversion for a robbery attempt.

"He went to a great deal of trouble he spent a great deal of time on it," the inspector said today.

The drama began around the store's 9 p.m. closing time as shoppers were leaving.

Cackette, a senior store employee, found a burning paper fuse leading to a plastic shopping bag.

Inside the shopping bag, police found a gasoline-filled plastic container. The bag had been placed beneath an electrical switch box, and next to the gas container was another shopping bag containing more gas, an oil substance and a quantity of black powder — probably poured from shotgun shells.

"The idea was that the gas would ignite and touch off the other package," Westover said. "It was basically an incendiary device."

45-MILE CHASE IN WRONG LANE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lewis Arsenault, 53, of Vancouver was charged Friday with impaired driving and dangerous driving following a 45-mile chase down the wrong side of the Trans Canada Highway at high speeds in the Fraser Valley.

The chase ended Thursday night with the driver in jail, dents to three cars and frazzled nerves for scores of other drivers.

RCMP at Chilliwack said they started getting phone calls from motorists at 8:40 p.m. complaining that there was a car heading west in the eastbound lanes of the divided highway.

A patrol car from Unit B freeway patrol at Abbotsford spotted the wrong-way car crossing Sumas Prairie and paced it at about 80 mph.

The police car stayed in the westbound lane as far as the 232nd street overpass in Langley, then crossed into the eastbound lane and stayed close behind the offending car.

The westbound car sideswiped an eastbound car at 264th Street and bounced off a police car at a roadblock set up by the Burnaby-based Unit B freeway patrol at the Langley-Surrey border.

The driver stopped voluntarily at 184th street, two miles west of the roadblock.

Prison System Failure—Fox

VANCOUVER (CP)—Solicitor-General Francis Fox said Friday that the present correctional system in Canada is a failure, and warned offenders that in the future it will be up to them to earn their own way out of prison.

Speaking at the opening session of a two-day symposium on Canadian prisons at the University of B.C., Fox said it is apparent the present system, based on the concept of rehabilitation, has not worked.

In the future, instead of trying to prescribe appropriate treatment to rehabilitate offenders, the corrections system will expect prisoners to make use of available opportunities to earn their own way out, he said.

Under what he described as the "opportunities model," Fox said that if offenders "want to get back out on the streets, they'll have to take advantage of the opportunities we're giving them."

"The opportunities principle . . . is based on the assumption that the offender has the capacity to make choices and that he is willing to accept his obligations and responsibilities."

Fox said that while there have been dramatic changes in the correction system over the past 15 years, these have not reduced recidivism, the crime rate, or the number of offenders in correctional institutions.

U.S. Steps In On Geneva Talks

Times News Services

GENEVA — U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger sent William Schaufele, his chief troubleshooter for Africa, to Geneva today to step in should the talks on Rhodesia's future begin to falter.

But black delegates rejected in advance Kissinger's peace package for Rhodesia designed to ease the country into majority rule within two years and, in public statements at least, scorned Schaufele's mediation bid.

Schaufele, assistant secretary of state for African affairs, said on arrival he was in Geneva as an "observer," but added, "I expect to see most, if not all the participants" in the talks as well as the British conference chairman, U.N. ambassador Ivor Richard.

Richard was meeting privately today with Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith, who has stated repeatedly that he will not budge from the Kissinger blueprint.

The British diplomat also was scheduled to see black leaders, who have vowed to take power by war if they don't get it at the conference table.

Black delegates said they saw little point in Schaufele's trip to Geneva.

Joshua Nkomo, leader of the moderate wing of the African National Council, said as far as he was concerned, Schaufele "is a tourist."

All four black nationalist delgations have rejected the Kissinger proposals, saying they want black control in one year, at the most and accused Smith's regime of committing atrocities against blacks in fighting with nationalist guerrillas.

In a curt, one-minute speech, Smith denounced the accusations as lies. His foreign minister, Pieter Van der Byl, called a news conference to detail countercharges that black guerrillas were committing atrocities against both blacks and whites in Rhodesia.

Smith told reporters he thought there was a possibility he would return to Rhodesia "if only for a few days" but could quickly return if necessary.

"I've got the feeling for the next week or so we may be sitting here twiddling our thumbs," he said. "If this is so, I think I will probably go back home if only for a few days.

"This in no way means I am turning my back on the conference, as I will leave a full delegation . . . and can return at the drop of a hat," Smith said.

Meanwhile, the people back in Rhodesia are more immediately concerned about the implications of the rapidly intensifying guerrilla war — which gets just as much coverage in the local media as the peace talks.

Major incursions by insurgents of the Zimbabwe Peoples Army (ZIPA), based mainly in neighboring Mozambique, have almost doubled since Sept. 24, when Smith announced that his government would surrender power to Rhodesia's black majority under the settlement proposed by Kissinger.

Government officials estimate that 3,000 guerrillas are now operating within the troubled southern African territory, double the estimate of last July. And at least another 5,000 are being trained in Mozambique camps.

Military communiques announcing guerrilla ambushes, attacks on farms, road minings and atrocities against local tribesmen are now issued almost daily, compared wih weekly announcements just three months ago.

Guard Stabbed

JOHANNESBERG (AP) — Blacks stabbed and shot a white guard in the black township of Guguletu outside Cape Town on Friday night during racial violence in isolated areas of South Africa, police reported today.

The guard stationed outside government offices, was reported in critical condition. Police said his own gun was used on him.

At the neighboring black township of Langa, police said they fired on a crowd of 1,000 students who began stoning police vehicles. There were no reports of casualties.

In Soweto, the huge black township outside Johannesburg, police said youths threw a fire bomb through the window of a beer hall, setting the building on fire.

Elsewhere in South Africa, two blacks were killed and two wounded when police opened fire on rioters in an African township near Dundee, about 180 miles southeast of Pretoria.

Fishboat Blast Kills Man

A fishing boat moored at the Government wharf in Tofino exploded and burned early today and the body of a man was recovered later.

The fire, which broke out about 2:40 a.m., was fought by volunteer firemen and RCMP. The victim, thought to be the sole occupant aboard the boat, was not identified in initial reports from the tiny community north of Long Beach on Vancouver Island's west coast.

BCGEU Calls For Mediator

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Government Employees' Union applied Friday to the labor relations board for a mediator to try to resolve a wage dispute with the provincial government.

John Fryer, BCGEU general secretary, said the application was made after the union broke off negotiations with the Government Employee Relations Bureau (GERB).

Fryer said negotiations ended after the bureau formally withdrew an earlier government pay offer of $45 a month, effective last Oct. 1.

The offer, made last August, was turned down by the union's 33,000 members by a vote of 61.5 per cent.

Fryer said that after the rejection vote, union negotiators pressed for an increase in the $45 offer and for a retroactive pay increase as compensation for the periods BCGEU components have worked without pay agreements.

He said management rejected both union proposals.

Under the Public Service Labor Relations Act any mediator appointed by the labor relations board has 10 days to try to resolve the dispute.

If mediation fails, the dispute goes to binding arbitration if both union and management agree.

Shopping Probe Requested

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Anti-Inflation Board has been asked to launch an investigation into the situation which makes it profitable for Canadians to cross the American border to do their grocery shopping.

Herb Gray (PC — Windsor West) wrote Jean-Luc Pepin, chairman of the board, drawing his attention to press reports that the prices of food and other items are so much lower in Bellingham and Detroit that it pays the people of Vancouver, Windsor to cross the border to shop.

He has heard too that Winnipeggers drive south to go shopping.

He also noted that Statistics Canada had reported recently that Vancouver had the highest increase in prices of any of the cities in Canada it surveys regularly.

He wrote the chairman to request, first that the board launch an immediate investigation into the situation which is attracting Canadians to do their regular weekly shopping over the border. He suggested the higher prices in this country may involve breaches of the anti-inflation act and its regulations.

Gray said if the board found there were infractions of the act it should take immediate corrective action to ensure that lower prices for the products in question are made available to Canadian consumers.

He also asked the board to use its authority to make a general investigation of the situation looking into the practices of both large companies under its administration and those not large enough to come under the mandatory controls.

Gray asked further that the board make known to the public the results of its findings. In this way it would be able to use the impact of public opinion to help correct the situation.

Freedom's Worth 5c

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Judge Les Bewley showed his frustration over freedom given penitentiary prisoners Friday by fining a parolee a nickel or two days in jail for being unlawfully at large.

Then he dug into his own pocket to pay Richard Herbert's fine.

Herbert, who has a criminal record dating back 14 years and ranging from burglary to assault, was sentenced in 1971 to six years for two Vancouver robberies, skipping bail and fraud.

Court was told that Herbert was paroled from the B.C. Penitentiary to a downtown correctional centre on Jan. 9. On Jan. 22 he was released for one hour and 15 minutes for lunch and didn't turn up for three days.

Herbert, who was due for full release Oct. 6, pleaded he had a bad back that affected his legs and couldn't get back.

"Legally, I must find you guilty but it is quite obvious from the facts of this case that someone in the parole service decided that you should be at large from the penitentiary to which a judge had sentenced you to six years," Judge Bewley said.

"It is also very apparent no one bothered to appeal the sentence of the original trial judge, to allow this man to be free . . . ridiculous as it may seem the Penitentiary Act deems a person to be legally in custody even though he is free to walk unsupervised around town."

Herbert had an ear-to-ear grin as he left the courtroom.

"Naturally we will have to appeal the decision," said prosecutor Kerr Clark.

Loaded Tanker Wandered Off Victoria

SEATTLE (AP) — A loaded oil tanker manned by a Chinese crew that could not understand English wandered around the Strait of Juan de Fuca last week, a Victoria ship's pilot says.

Capt. Hill Wilson, 2011 Frederick Norris, said the Panamanian tanker White Peony went in and out of shipping lanes, at times inbound on lanes normally reserved for traffic outbound from Washington inland waters.

The White Peony carried 24.5 million gallons of oil.

Wilson said he overheard discussions between the White Peony and the U.S. Coast Guard, and their attempts to communicate.

The ship reportedly missed the Ediz Hook light at Port Angeles, where pilots usually board eastbound vessels.

The White Peony was finally stopped five miles short of Dungeness and a pilot boarded and led her to the Atlantic Richfield refinery dock at Cherry Point, near Bellingham.

Wilson was aboard a Norwegian freighter and kept a brief log on the White Peony's movements. He reported the incident to the B.C. Secretariat of Environment and Land Use.

The U.S. Coast Guard said Friday it was "completely unaware" the ship was headed the wrong direction at times.

The coast guard chief of staff in Seattle, Capt. Stuart Beckwith, said he had been advised the situation was not serious. He said, "It sounded like sort of a foulup that seemed to get back on the track. I don't know what this Captain Wilson's concerns are."

The coast guard said shipping lanes are not recognized by international law.

Wilson said the traffic system "is a bit useless." He said that in a "crunch" the system does not work.

Wilson also said the White Peony's crewmen were putting up warning lights near Port Angeles, and should have had the lights in place at the mouth of the Strait, 60 miles earlier.

Historic Venice Awash

VENICE (AP) — Floodwaters washed over historic sections of this famous canal city today as high winds and heavy rain battered Italy from the Alps to Sicily.

Sirens wailed during the night to warn the 60,000 residents of Venice's historic centre of approaching high waters. Ten years ago, a disastrous flood in the city damaged churches, walls and monuments.

City authorities were out at dawn today, setting up catwalks of wooden planks across St. Mark's square and in other low-lying areas to provide passage for tourists and other pedestrians.

The lagoon swelled to a peak more than four feet above its average level. It was the second flood this month.

Heavy rains sent the Seveso and Lambro rivers from their banks, putting large areas of Milan under water. Traffic was paralyzed in many streets when rushing waters knocked out traffic lights.

Railway traffic to France and Switzerland was disrupted by a landslide between Domodossola and Varzo, north of Turin. The main line through the Simplon tunnel was closed and railway authorities had to reroute international rail traffic on long detours.

General Regret Voiced On McCarthy Change

Citizen resource groups are not too impressed with Premier Bill Bennett's cabinet changes, but most expressed regret today that Grace McCarthy is no longer head of the department of recreation and conservation.

The appointments of Victoria MLA Sam Bawlf to head the department which includes the parks branch, and old guard Socred Jim Chabot as minister of mines, also hasn't allayed their fears that the fisheries and wildlife resources are low on the government's priority list.

On his appointment, Bawlf from the start seems to have rubbed environmentalists the wrong way when he referred to himself as being head of the "leisure" services instead of a minister responsible for several resources.

Other governments across Canada, including the United States, regard fisheries, wildlife, recreation and even esthetics, as resources — in the same category as mines and forestry.

"I hope Bawlf realizes that fisheries is not a leisure service," said Howard English, a member of the advisory committee to the International Salmon Commission.

Brian Inglis, president of the Victoria Amalgamated Conservation Society, hoped Bawlf would co-operate with the federal government in implementing its salmon enhancement program and in the rehabilitation of creeks and rivers.

Ed Mankelow of Duncan, chairman of parks committee, B.C. Wildlife Federation, was sorry to hear Grace McCarthy had relinquished the conservation and recreation portfolio.

"But I realize the portfolio, as well as being provincial secretary," was too much work," he said. "She is a strong cabinet member and has a grasp of what parks and conservation is all about."

Mankelow urged Bawlf to complete the unfinished Pacific Rim National Park.

Eve Howden, a director of the Victoria Sierra Club, said she would have preferred McCarthy as head of the department.

"Bawlf appears to me to be a little too urban oriented," she said. "The people of British Columbia will have to wait and see if the quality of life, clean rivers, fisheries and parks mean anything to the new minister."

Douglas Turnbull, president of the Victoria Natural History Society, said he is pleased that conservation and recreation are a separate department.

"I'm glad these agencies were not incorporated in other departments," he said. "As for Bawlf, I know nothing about him."

The cabinet changes also drew comments from some politicians:

Conservative leader Scott Wallace said he approves most of the cabinet changes but hesitates to endorse the appointment of James Chabot (Columbia River) as minister of mines and petroleum resources.

"For a party which just expended so much energy at its annual convention trying to prove how moderate it has become, Chabot is a strange choice," said Dr. Wallace.

Chabot has in the past been known for inflamatory remarks directed at the opposition.

Dr. Wallace said that of the three new cabinet members, Hewitt is the best choice.

"He works hard, he's solid and I think he'll do a good job which is a lot more than (Don) Phillips did," said Dr. Wallace.

Wallace said the appointment of Attorney-General Garde Gardom as government house leader is one of the wisest decisions Premier Bill Bennett has made.

"He (Gardom) will elevate the entire house by his own example and good humor," said Wallace.

Bawlf's appointment as minister of recreation and conservation was also welcomed by Victoria Mayor Mike Young.

Young said he is particularly hopeful that under Bawlf more ministerial time and attention will be devoted to programs to improve the legislative precinct and Inner Harbor.

Bawlf's background of experience on city council gives him an "appreciation" of the problems, Young said, and he looks forward to seeing the CIDC play a more active role in future.

The president of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture, Ralph Baricello, said he hopes the appointment of Hewitt as agriculture minister will mean the industry will receive more attention from the provincial government.

Small problems would crop up and because there wasn't a minister at hand to nip them in the bud they soon grew and "the next thing we knew we had a conflagration."

the weather

A low front advanced rather rapidly across the Gulf of Alaska, which brought a splashing of rain as well as squally winds to the north coast. The system will continue eastward as a fairly energetic entity to spread an area of rain across northern and central portions of the Interior. With overnight temperatures near freezing, wet snow is likely at northern locations during the morning. In addition to its eastward motion, the trailing portion of the front will sag southward bringing some rain to southern portions of the province for Halloween.

4,000 Homeless

YAMAGATA, Japan (Reuter)—Fire swept through Sakata City on Japan's northwest coast today, destroying more than 1,000 buildings and leaving nearly 4,000 people homeless in the country's worst blaze in 15 years.

Police said two men, including the city's fire chief, were missing. Twelve persons were injured in the fire, which started in a movie theatre.

Only the Niita River, which bisects the city of 100,000 people, prevented total destruction as hundreds of firemen, backed by soldiers and about 90 fire engines, fought to quell the flames. The fire, which had been fanned by strong winds, was eventually brought under control 11 hours after it started.

Thousands of people had been evacuated to the safe side of the river. Housewives fled carrying as many possessions as possible on their backs.

Some 3,000 firemen, police and soldiers were mobilized to clear the debris after the fire.

Police said winds of up to 107 m.p.h. spread the flames for about half a mile from their original starting point.

The winds died down early today allowing rescuers to scour the wreckage of homes, offices, shops and apartments.

Pipe Impact Study Urges Long Delay

OTTAWA (CP) — Construction of a northern pipeline any time within 10 to 15 years after settlement of native land claims would be detrimental to native groups, the staff of the Berger commission says.

In a draft report to Mr. Justice Thomas Berger, now studying the impact of pipeline construction in the North, the commission staff makes no specific recommendation on what should be done about the land claims issue.

But the 800-page report, released Friday, said native interests would be prejudiced if the authorities went ahead with pipeline construction before a claims settlement, at the same time it was being negotiated, or for a period of 10 or 15 years after agreement was reached.

A delay would be needed to set up the institutions and structures "which will guarantee the native people of the North a secure, political, social and economic base upon which to face the future."

The report recommends that Canadian Arctic Gas Pipeline Ltd. change its proposed route to carry natural gas from Alaska across the northern Yukon to the Mackenzie River Delta and down the Mackenzie Valley.

It says the Fairbanks corridor along the Alaskan Highway, a route already considered and rejected by Arctic Gas, offers "environmental advantages."

Another recommendation is for government to set up a special agency to oversee construction and operation of the pipeline and to monitor its effects on the North.

The report is careful to say that the recommendations are not binding on Mr. Justice Berger and he is free to reject any of them. It also reserves the right of the staff to change the recommendations later.

Justice Berger ordered the release of the document to give groups participating in the inquiry a chance to reply before he wraps up hearings Nov. 19.

The commission staff made no recommendation on the land claims issue "because it's a matter for the government to decide."

But it wanted its view on record.

Native groups appearing before Judge Berger say no pipeline should be built until their claims are settled, allowing them a say in the development of their land.

8,000 Expected To Watch Salmon

More than 8,000 people are expected to visit Goldstream Park this weekend to see the salmon run.

But park naturalists hope dog-owners will keep their pets at home or make sure they are on a leash when they visit the park.

Naturalist Carol Berryman said one dog walked in and out of Goldstream River Friday and caused moe than 100 salmon to spook.

"The smell of the dog was carried downstream and the fish went berserk," she said. "In one pool salmon thrashed about for 15 minutes."

She explained salmon don't eat when they enter a river to spawn.

"They lose a tremendous amount of energy when they are frightened," she said. "They need the energy to get upstream and to spawn."

"Berryman said volunteers from Pearson College will help patrol the river this weekend.

So far about 1,000 chum salmon have spawned or are in the river to spawn, she said. Twelve cohoe and the same number of spring salmon have been counted.

The salmon run will continue during the month of November and the early part of December.

India Postpones Elections Again

NEW DELHI (CP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government announced today there will be no national elections in India until March, 1978, extending the term of the present Parliament to seven years from six.

Under the state of emergency declared by Mrs. Gandhi last June, her government already has extended its term to six years from five by postponing elections due last March.

Israeli soldier opens gate for wounded Christian Phalangist

Israelis Aid Lebanese

By STUART AUERBACH
Washington Post

KAFER KILI, Lebanon—The car screeched to a stop alongside a gate in the sturdy chain-link and barbed-wire fence that separates Israel from Lebanon, and a bleeding Lebanese rightist army soldier was helped out of the back seat.

As an Israeli soldier on the other side opened the gate, the Lebanese fighter's buddies helped him over the border for medical treatment from an Israeli army doctor.

The scene was repeated 10 minutes later when another Lebanese soldier—part of the rightist, mostly Christian army that is still fighting largely Moslem leftist Lebanese and Palestinian combined forces in south Lebanon despite a cease-fire that appears to be holding in the rest of the country—was helped into Israel for medical care.

They had come from the town of Marjayoun, six miles north of here, where the two Lebanese armies were apparently still exchanging gunfire. Rightist soldiers claimed control of Marjayoun, but they refused to allow reporters who had driven here from Beirut, 63 miles to the northwest, to visit the town.

Eyewitnesses have seen rightist forces fighting with Israeli weapons in the past. But this is one of the few times the collaboration between Israel and the rightists have been demonstrated so graphically.

There was no question that the wounded Lebanese soldiers—who were not carrying any arms—would be let into Israel, which under its "good fence" policy has been helping residents of both Moslem and Christian towns along the border.

The Israelis have provided medical care, bought Lebanese tobacco and other produce and supplied food to the villagers. They also have run a water pipe over the border and installed four spigots on the Lebanese side.

Villagers filled large plastic containers with water. While this was going on, a car with diplomatic licence plates from the United Arab Emirates — a federation of oil-rich Arab gulf states — drove past along the Lebanese side of the border.

The issue of Israeli's aid to the rightist forces in South Lebanon was debated by the Arab League summit in Cairo, where Egypt's President Anwar Sadat said, "we will continue to confront Israeli moves in south Lebanon with all our forces and firmness."

But western diplomatic observers in Beirut said they feel Israel has not overplayed its hand on the Lebanese border by mounting too great a show of force there.

Yet Israel's interest in south Lebanon was evident from a drive along the border. Half-tracks loaded with Israeli soldiers sat on its side of the fence, guns pointing toward Lebanon, and the Israelis kept a close watch over the border from sandbagged bunkers built within the past month.

Both the rightists and the Israelis have said they do not want the Palestinians returned to "Fatahland," the hilly area adjacent to both Israel and Syria from which Palestinian commandos mounted raids into Israel during the late 1960s and early 1970s.

To insure their control, the rightists are trying to hold a line of small towns running from Ras Nqaoura on the Mediterranean Sea to Hasbaya, northeast of Marjayoun near Lebanon's Syrian border.

From visits with troops of both the rightist and leftist side it was obvious that the rightist forces were the better armed and equipped. The uniforms of the soldiers at the rightist post near here were identical to those of the Israeli army and their arms looked new and clean.

Beirut Clashes Threaten Shaky Lebanon Ceasefire

BEIRUT (UPI)—Lebanon's shaky 10-day ceasefire was near collapse today because of renewed clashes in Beirut and a warning by rightist leader Camille Chamoun that his forces may resume fighting.

Casualty figures from fighting in the capital Friday and the Chouf region, 25 miles southeast of Beirut, were the highest for any 24-hour period since the ceasefire began.

Two persons were killed and 17 were wounded in Beirut, according to a hospital spokesman, and rightists claimed to have killed 16 leftists in the southern suburbs.

A right-wing radio said at least 37 persons have died in fighting in the hilly Chouf region, a leftist stronghold where trouble flared three days ago.

Rightist leader Camille Chamoun said if the situation continued to deteriorate his forces will disregard the ceasefire and "resume our freedom of military action."

Chamoun has called on President Elias Sarkis to ask the 2,300-strong Arab peacekeeping force to intervene in the Chouf area and said he will ask for Syrian aid if there is no response.

"We are not ready to tolerate further aggression after today and we shall strike with an iron fist on every hand that wants to harm Lebanon and its independence," he said.

In particular, he said, 9,000 Iraqi troops had participated in all violations of the ceasefire in Beirut, the mountains and the south.

Chinese Committee Probes Radicals

By ROSS H. MUNRO

PEKING — The Chinese Communist Party has established a commission to investigate the activities of Chiang Ching and the other three radicals who were purged earlier this month.

The formation of the investigatory commission is viewed by analysts here as part of a slow and careful approach which the moderates seem to have adopted toward the consolidation of their power now that they have swept their radical opponents from any threatening positions.

Diplomats here who two weeks ago were predicting a series of early announcements revealing new political appointments and formally outlining charges against the four radicals now feel that several weeks and conceivably several months could go by before the announcements are made.

There are two probable reasons for a go-slow approach. First, competition among various groups like the army and the bureaucracy which want to ensure that the new political lineup is favorable to their interests; second, a widespread desire to go though all the formalities of consultation and official meetings in order to establish the legitimacy of all the political changes.

Diplomats who have learned about the investigatory commission—formally announced on wallposters seen by foreigners unanimously believe the commission's primary job is to provide "evidence" for the already-publicized verdict that the four purged radicals are guilty of "towering crimes." According to at least one foreigner who read the posters, the commission will be headed by Heh Chieng-ying, the minister of defence and a leading moderate.

LUXURIOUS JAIL ENDS FOR PERON

PERON

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — Former Argentine president Isabel Peron was being detained today in the relative austerity of a naval arsenal south of here after spending seven months under house arrest at a luxurious lakeside mansion in the foothills of the Andes.

The 45-year-old widow of Gen. Juan Peron was transferred Friday to a residential chalet inside the barbed-wire compound of the Azupardo arsenal at Azul, 180 miles south of here.

A communique from the military government said she remained under detention in accordance with a resolution of the military junta which ousted her last March 24.

IRA Squad Hunts Drumm's Slayers

BELFAST (CP) — A Protestant assassination group called the Ulster Freedom Fighters (UFF) said Friday its members killed Mrs. Maire Drumm, the former IRA political activist called Grandma Venom by the British.

An anonymous man claiming to represent the UFF telephoned a Belfast newspaper and said three of the organization's members shot Mrs. Drumm, 56, as she lay in her hospital bed Thursday night.

Irish Republican Army sources said an IRA death squad was hunting the killers.

The UFF is blamed by police for dozens of killings and bombings in Northern Ireland in more than seven years of violence involving both Protestant and Roman Catholic extremists.

It is widely believed to be the "strike arm" of the Ulster Defence Association, largest of the province's Protestant street armies fighting the IRA.

CBC DROPS BBC NEWS

MONTREAL (CP) — The BBC news will be carried for the last time on CBC radio today.

The CBC announced that it is dropping the BBC news after carrying it daily for more than 30 years.

Officials said the Canadian network is adequately staffed to provide extensive foreign coverage without having to depend on outsiders. any longer.

Bolivia Orders Pepin Out

LA PAZ (AP) — Marcel Pepin, president of the World Federation of Labor and former head of Quebec's Confederation of National Trade Unions (CNTU), has been accused of making "subversive remarks" about Bolivia's military government and ordered to leave the country, it was reported Friday.

Local representatives of the Belgium-based labor federation said the action was taken after Pepin held a news conference at a La Paz hotel Wednesday.

Authorities banned the local news media from reporting Pepin's statements, saying they were "a call for worker subversion."

Pepin told the conference that "Bolivians exiled in Chile are being subjected to the most inhumane treatment imaginable," federation representatives said.

He also said "there is no press freedom in Bolivia," adding the federation would begin a campaign to restore human rights in Bolivia and secure the return of Bolivians exiled in Chile, the officials reported.

Tape recordings of the news conference were seized by government security agents and several federation delegates were detained, the representatives said.

Morgentaler Charged Again

MONTREAL (CP) — Dr. Henry Morgentaler — already acquitted three times by jury on charges of performing illegal abortions — has been called to stand trial Dec. 13 on another illegal abortion charge.

The doctor appeared in court Friday but did not say a word when Associate Chief Justice James Huggesen set the trial date on one of eight pending illegal abortion charges.

Morgentaler, 53, served 10 months of an 18-month sentence in 1975 after an acquittal on a first charge of performing an illegal operation on a 26-year-old foreign student was overturned by the Quebec Court of Appeal.

The appeal court decision was maintained by the Supreme Court of Canada.

While in jail, Dr. Morgentaler was ordered to face trial on a second illegal abortion charge which also resulted in a jury acquittal — and this time, the decision was upheld by the Quebec Court of Appeal.

The third trial — a retrial on the original charge of performing an illegal abortion on the foreign student — was ordered last January by Justice Minister Ron Basford and ended in a Sept. 17 acquittal.

Defence lawyer Claude-Armand Sheppard maintained that Dr. Morgentaler was protected by a law which states that, under certain circumstances, an otherwise illegal act becomes legal because it is necessary and indispensible to the health or life of a person.

Pandering to Prejudice

Frightened and flinching from what they interpret as a move to the right by the Canadian electorate, Liberal cabinet ministers display uncharacteristic anti-liberal attitudes in their public pronouncements these days. Solicitor-General Francis Fox talks about a new "get tough" policy in penitentiaries, adding that he is talking about using force to ensure institutions are properly run. Nothing is said about correcting the more complex causes of prison violence. No, we'll just hammer the inmates and that will be the end of it.

It is one thing to play to the electorate, but quite another to pander to base prejudices among a vocal minority of Canadian voters. And Fox is not even the most flagrant example of the Liberal's new strategy of exploiting their critics' biases. That honor is left to newly appointed Immigration Minister Bud Cullen.

Speaking to party faithful in Ontario, the minister said immigrants who may antagonize native born Canadians should not be brought into the country. Accepting refugees from countries such as Mozambique or Angola, who would take jobs from Canadians, would create needless problems, he added. Cullen awkwardly tried to pry himself loose from the racial hook by saying that if black majority rule in Rhodesia forces whites to flee, Britain would have to make representation to Canada too, the same as Portugal is making representation on behalf of Portuguese Angolans.

At first glance it all looks fair and equitable. The minister is justifiably concerned about Canada's high unemployment. On closer examination he is saying accepting refugees from Mozambique and Angola would create needless problems. But he does not rule out that an inevitable exodus of white Rhodesians might find a home here, after the proper British representation, of course. Perhaps it hasn't occurred to Cullen that some Canadians might find white Rhodesian refugees as unpalatable as Angolans might be to others.

Refugees of all political persuasions have traditionally found a home in Canada. The minister does a disservice to Canadians in general by drawing fine lines and coding his verbal messages. In the first quarter of 1976 32,359 immigrants came to Canada, a drop of 25.5 per cent from the same period last year. The Trudeau administration has played fast and loose with national immigration policy. First we had the so called green paper on the subject, subtly appealing to various prejudices. Then, by order-in-council, not legislative initiative, it should be said, the government stiffened the rules. Former immigration minister Robert Andras tacitly acknowledged this when he said on Sept. 3 that the current drop in immigration reflects "the effect of regulation changes," announced in February and October, 1974.

It is not up to cabinet, but the Canadian people to determine changes in immigration policy. During the first quarter of 1976 Asian and Pacific immigration was slightly up from the same period last year. Africa and the Middle East were marginally ahead of last year from 7.4 per cent of the total to 8.8 per cent. Still, Britain and the United States continue to lead the list in annual numbers of immigrants. Despite the miniscule numbers of Africans currently being allowed into Canada the minister sounds as though they may be further cut back.

Like blades of grass some members of the Trudeau cabinet appear ready to bow in front of the slightest ill wind. What the country wants are some principled stands, such as the government showed on capital punishment. Canada's current immigration policies are a thin paste made up of a green paper and some grey statements. It is time for some real glue or the whole will come unstuck as Joe Clark prophesies.

Three for the Show

Cabinet shuffles are always the subject of much speculation and overblown publicity. The event itself is almost always less of a change than anticipated. But Premier Bennett milked this one for all it was worth. On Thursday he announced government reorganization, turning aside all questions about the three new ministers saying, "you'll find out at Government House tomorrow at 10 a.m." No announcements or press conferences to herald the new ministers of the crown, just a breathless wait at the house on Rockland Friday morning as pomp and circumstance unfolded.

Because departments have been changed to ministries under the new system, the entire cabinet had to be resworn, including three beaming additions — Sam Bawlf (Victoria), Jim Hewitt (Boundary Similkameen), Jim Chabot (Columbia River). In general terms, the choices were good. The premier had to choose carefully between his two uneasy factions of new pragmatists and old guard.

Chabot was a natural choice for the old guard. He was a well-liked member under W. A. C. Bennett's reign and served as labor minister in a former cabinet. His appointment to the mines portfolio is especially interesting, considering that the former minister, Tom Waterland was a mining engineer. Waterland keeps the forests half of his double portfolio, but it would appear he made too many political mistakes to hang on to his area of expertise.

Sam Bawlf's appointment is surprising in that he is a freshman MLA who has kept a low profile in his first year of provincial government. Nor has Bawlf demonstrated an overriding interest in recreation until Friday morning. Still, the former Victoria alderman proved himself an able businessman in private life, and adding another cabinet minister from lower Vancouver Island makes good political sense following the flak from this area directed against the government over ferry rates and other matters.

Hewitt's appointment to agriculture was the least surprising. A former Penticton alderman and credit union manager, he is known as a moderate Social Credit member, and one of the party's best assets in the interior. The appointment will also still cries from the party about the need for a full-time agriculture minister. Don Phillips will now stick to economic development and the complex question of marketing B.C. coal.

Yet two things stand out in this minor shuffle. None of the party's rabid right-wingers such as Jack Kempf were knighted. Nor is there any representation from the northwest part of the province. In plucking Chabot from the past the premier picked a genial member of that fading fraternity. The other two additions are definitely from the ranks of the new Socreds. Bennett continues on his deft moderate course. As ministers of spanking new ministries, we wish the three new cabinet members the best of luck in their tasks ahead, which we will watch with much interest.

Liquor Branch Changes: Color Them Moody Blue

As speculation increases on what liquor law changes Attorney-General Garde Gardom plans on or about Nov. 1, it is interesting to note that most observers expect institutional changes.

For example, one report says B.C. hotel owners are purchasing liquor dispensing equipment in anticipation of being allowed to sell spirits in beer parlors, the same as Alberta, Saskatchewan and Ontario.

No one speculates on the possibility of more cocktail lounges or pizza parlors being able to sell draft beer. That's because the powerful hotel lobby would frown on any practice that diminished the daily swill or their profits.

And what about the average moderate consumer of alcoholic beverages in this province? Cattle are treated with less contempt. The provincial liquor administration branch, which turned over $120,300,398 in profits to the provincial government last year, doesn't even provide beer coolers. One is expected to pick up one's warm case of beer and lug it to a cash register.

Once home with the dubious chemical prize, the government expects you to cool it with your own electricity. For a few paltry thousand the branch could supply coolers throughout the province, as any competitive business would do.

It leads me to believe that if government had the monopoly on ice cream sales it would display the product on top of steaming radiators.

When it comes to wine, the branch displays an even more addled attitude, if that's possible. At the McKenzie Avenue outlet in Saanich, for example, all the corked wines with the exception of 10 bottles, last Wednesday were upright on the shelves.

Wine stored in this manner for longer than two weeks is probably undrinkable. The cork dries out and shrinks, allowing air to enter the bottle, ruining the wine. Anyone who buys a bottle of corked wine from this store is daft. Does the government care? No. Stack 'em up and ship 'em out seems to be the philosophy.

Earlier this week the Anti-Inflation Board named 96 companies for excess profits. While the qualifiers surrounding the announcement rendered it meaningless, most of the excesses were small. What would the board think of a price fixing monopoly like the B.C. liquor administration branch, if it was under AIB aegis?

The branch has a cosy little selective policy that marks up most imported wines 117 per cent. B.C.-produced wines are only hit with a 66 per cent levy, almost half the amount importer's labor under.

Of course, this selected markup is in fact a hidden tariff on imported wine. This is quite illegal under the British North America Act, section 91 (2). Only the federal government is allowed to set tariffs. Perhaps the day will come when B.C.'s long suffering wine drinkers will forego a case of specially imported Mouton Rothschild to challenge the government in the courts.

Until then, wine drinkers in this province will continue to suffer the highest taxes in the civilized world to imbibe their favorite beverage, while the Philistines, including most of the liquor branch officials, continue to sneer at "wine snobs."

Each to his own.

Unfortunately, that's not the case despite some interesting figures. Between 1970 and 1975 gallonage of imported wines sold in B.C. rose 151 per cent while only a 44 per cent increase was recorded in Canadian wine sales.

These figures say a great deal, considering the high tariffs on imported wines and the partisan listing policies of the branch.

It is ironic that the current Social Credit administration is probably the most wine-oriented government in B.C. history. Even the recent annual Social Credit convention opened with a wine tasting party.

Originally the sipping was to encompass both imported and domestic wines. But that was changed to domestic only. I wonder why? Still, a number of Social Credit cabinet ministers and MLAs have spoken out on the government's wine policies. The premier, born and raised in the Okanagan, is knowledgable on every aspect of the wine industry.

So what can we expect next week when Garde Gardom announces changes? Probably very little for the consumer, although I would happily drink my words if proven wrong. No, beer drinkers will still have to ice their suds and wine drinkers can drown their sorrows in a bottle of Chambolle-Musigny at $14 a crack for a commune burgundy, if they can afford it.

Otherwise its Moody Blue for Lonesome Charlie and all the other turkeys British Columbians are encouraged to drink by the policies of their provincial government.—G.R.O.

Music Building

I hope that someone somewhere will make the decision to proceed with the University of Victoria music building now. The university music department provides excellent work and has distinguished teachers, some of international repute, yet they have to teach in a very inadequate building.

Victoria's extraordinary musical standards depend upon the continued success of its university, conservatory and symphony orchestra. All three institutions have to work in circumstances that are far from ideal and the university's quarters are very cramped indeed. I hope that something is done soon. — Robin Wood, F.R.A.M., Principal, Victoria Conservatory of Music.

Political Asylum

In writing this letter I am, I believe, adding my voice to those of countless other Canadians who are disturbed and shocked over the case of Leonard Peltier. That this man (who has not been proved guilty!) should have been kept in solitary confinement for nine months, and in other ways treated as a dangerous convicted criminal, seems totally unbelievable.

It is not, however, this aspect of the Peltier case on which I now appeal to you. The question of L. Peltier's extradition to the U.S. is now ultimately in the hands of the justice minister. I ask myself if I could arrive at a judgment which would be both compassionate and wise, for I realize what such a judgment would entail: the risk of offending an all-too powerful neighbor state. I think that the pressures brought to bear at this time must be very great; nevertheless, I hope and believe that Canada will be able to withstand them. I fervently hope and pray (I use the word in its actual sense) that the justice minister will extend in the name of the people of Canada, this country's sanctuary to Leonard Peltier: that he will find a verdict of political asylum. — Dorothy I. Webster, 931 Bank Street, Victoria.

Trident demonstration in Victoria last year organized by Pacific Life.

Pacific Life

As a resident of this fine city and as a native born Canadian citizen I pose a question to you. Why is there no daily or even weekly coverage of the actions of a group known as the Pacific Life Community in this city?

This group has an office at 29 Menzies Street. It is engaged in forms of protest pertaining to the abolition of nuclear arms. Since Victoria is situated only 60 miles from a nuclear missile site, one would consider it urgently important to follow the workings of a benevolent organization intent on the termination of that site by peaceful means.

I and my friends wholeheartedly support the Pacific Life Community and would like to know how it is getting along. May I take this opportunity to commend you on a consistently readable newspaper?

Keep up the good news. — Jim Prendergast, 2531 Government Street.

Unamusing

Your response to former defence minister James Richardson exercising his right to express his opinion publically is not amusing. I intend looking to some other newspaper to obtain a more acceptable view of the Canadian political scene. — Major H. T. Giles (Ret.), Victoria.

Seabelts

As one who has conducted on-scene investigation of motor vehicle crashes and monitored the treatment of the injured in hospital emergency wards, I take strong exception to the Socred convention's resolution against provincial implementation of a law requiring the wearing of seatbelts.

My personal experience supports research findings that seatbelts are effective in preventing deaths and reducing injuries. I have studied far too many cases where the belts have not been used, and I wish to present some arguments in favor of legislated use.

Mandatory belt-wearing constitutes no more of an infringement of civil liberties than does childhood innoculation against debilitating illnesses, quarantine of persons with contagious diseases, the wearing of helmets by motorcyclists or use of safety equipment by industrial or construction workers. All are mandatory public health measures designed to protect individuals from harm and society from needless costs through the use of known and proven techniques.

Society collectively, through mandatory medical schemes and taxes, bears the costs of each individual's failure to wear seatbelts. You and I pay daily for the treatment and rehabilitation of persons needlessly injured, while we continue to ignore the successes achieved through seat-belt legislation in Australia, New Zealand, France and Ontario. As a cost-saving program this legislation should be a priority for a government preoccupied with budgetary restraint.

As a new perspective on the individual's "right" to remain unbelted we should consider that this failure to buckle up has been ruled contributory negligence in several Canadian court cases. With combined lap-shoulder harnesses in a large percentage of cars, the belts are visible thus making the law enforceable. With only one automobile insurance agency, this province could, through differential court settlements, impose financial, penalties on those who fail to comply with the law.

Messrs. Bennett and Davis, your responsibility is to the citizens of this province and not to the misinformed delegates to the Social Credit convention. Mandatory seatbelt-wearing legislation is a public health measure the time for which has come and it is your responsibility to implement this legislation during the next session of the legislature — Bruce I. Heayn, 2821 Irma Street.

Headline Criticized

I wish to point out and comment upon an unfair and biased headline in the Oct. 22 issue of the Times. The headline I am referring to is Glazier Seeks Second Term on City Council. The bulk of the article was not on Ald. Glazier's announcement of his candidacy. Instead, it was a general article announcing the stated candidacies of Bill McElroy, Bob Ellis and Murray Glazier. It also announced that Ald. Hood would not seek re-election, and that as of the date of the article Ald. John Hayes had not declared his candidacy. The article itself was quite fair and impartial, but why the headline? Ald. Glazier's candidacy is no more important nor significant, nor newsworthy than that of any of these other gentlemen. Let's not play favorites in pushing the candidacy of any of these individuals unless this is stated openly and clearly as what you are doing, and then do it on your editorial page, if you please. — Bob Stewart, 1821 Belmont Street.

Majority Rights

The federal government in its desperate attempt to indoctrinate Canadians into accepting permanent bilingualism continues to overlook a very important fact. Namely that the number of French-speaking Canadians represent a dwindling minority of roughly 20 per cent, so why should they be entitled to 50 per cent of the linguistic rights?

The majority of English-speaking Canadians, from many racial backgrounds, recognize English as the most practical language in North America and therefore do not demand official use of their original languages. A nation with two languages will always be divided. Take Belgium as an example.

The bilingual problem must be faced squarely in that bilingualism is acceptable only in the province of Quebec.

We are told that if the language problem is not resolved then Quebec will secede from Confederation. To bow to such a threat would be stupid. People who make such statements should be told that Quebec will be thrown out of Confederation if her politicans continue this attitude. There is not a shadow of a doubt that Quebec would be the big loser after separating.

The main reason that the Trudeau government is completely unable to understand the attitudes and aspirations of the majority of Canadians should be obvious to even the casual observer. The federal cabinet is composed mainly of French-Canadians as also is the governor-general, the chief of staff of the armed forces plus an overwhelming amount of newly-promoted civil servants and armed forces promotions.

Bilingualism is the reason for most of those promotions, not ability. Apart from the fact this tends to magnify the French rights, it could also be construed as racism and bigotry.

In granting rights to a minority let us first make sure we do not detract from the rights of the majority. — Concerned.

Federal Grits Can't Disown Bourassa . . . Yet

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA— The parents of a well-laced, responsible Ottawa family recently told friends and relatives that they had given up on their son, now almost 30. He was banished from their home, disowned.

The parents had concluded under the duress of continual, anti-social behaviour that whatever the lad's inadequencies, genetic or environmental in origin, for which they might be thought responsible, they and the rest of the family were being destroyed. They had to excise him, they felt, or see the family unit and each member smashed, at least psychologically.

In terms of national politics this is not so much a parable as an allegory, which won't be completed for two or three years.

The parents, in the allegory, are Messrs. Trudeau, Marchand and Lalonde. The son, of course, is Robert Bourassa. The family is the Liberal party. They created and nurtured him, for example, most protectively in October, 1970. He symbolized — or should have — the federal choice and all its beneficence for Quebec.

Few people note it or say it. Perhaps premiers, especially of Ontario and Quebec, are too mighty now, their governments too much endowed with bureaucracy and budgets in the billions.

Perhaps federal Ottawa has let its sense of mission piddle away as its own giganticism and luxuriance have flowered.

The reality is that for all our space and mileage, we are a country with a small population, where most people of any office should or could easily know the others, even through or over the barriers of language. We should be a family at least towards each other.

At federal, provincial, municipal or metropolitan levels of government — taking them all together — we have a glut of politicians, a reek of public officials. Probably in consequence of such grandeur in government, there's more and more a quality of the international — of relations between sovereign states — in our national affairs. Of course, provincial premiers given our dividend and joint jurisdictions, are an indispensable part of national affairs. Need they be heads of state? No politician, no premier, better illustrated the jumped-up sovereignty of the provinces than Bourassa.

No premier in modern history, even Duplessis, has given so little to the country as a whole. Think of the country as "family". Thus, there is exquisite pain for the Trudeau Liberals that Mr. Bourassa has called an election at this sad time for them and will run under the banner of federalism — "profitable" federalism.

Surely as much as the bilingualism program and the "volteface" on wage and price controls, Bourassa (and Jean Drapeau too) is an almost unlooseable mill-stone to the Trudeau Liberals. If Bourassa were a bigger, broader human being with even a modicum of warmth and good feeling for Canada as a whole, neither national unity nor the Trudeau government would be in such a peril.

It would have been so easy for Bourassa to have jollied English-speaking Canada outside Quebec. Some graciousness. Some brotherly concern. Some visits. Some real interest. Nothing of such has ever been shown, even in the slightest, by Bourassa.

He comes and goes to provincial premier's conferences and federal-provincial conferences like the head of an autonomous country which must have dealings with the other premiers and with Ottawa. Diplomatic dealings. Financial arrangements. But not mutual concern. Nothing familiar. Never a whisper fron Bourassa about the other regions' difficulties. Unless he can use them to sustain his own case or demands. especially against Ottawa.

And, as was noted at the beginning, the federal Liberals made Bourassa. They're stuck with him in their family, even though he gives them no worthy repute as a family. So long as he remains in it, they can't disown him. The alternative in Quebec cannot be swallowed. If they cut him loose, they couldn't even be sure that he wouldn't out-separate the separatists and Levesques.

The federal Liberals from Quebec fume at Bourassa's arch cleverness. He's always scheming and, in conversations, bragging about his cleverness.

Here he is, with two years of a mandate left, and the largest majority in Quebec history, aiming for re-confirmation from the provincial electorate next month.

To their chagrin, they know he's almost sure to get in, and afterwards, to continue to be a mill-stone for them as they drag to defeat. Blamed for giving Quebec too much, he's a son they detest and can't disown.

BOURASSA . . . the spoiled child

Not All Hail The Emperor

By ROBERT WHYMANT
Manchester Guardian

TOKYO — Reviving controversy about Hirohito's war guilt, a national commemoration is planned for next month to celebrate the Emperor's 50th year on the throne, a reign which at least in its early half was less than glorious.

The jubilee fete and its government's sponsorship in particular aroused widespread but somewhat guarded criticism, within the bounds considered safe in a nation where rightist fanatics react violently to anything smacking of lese-majeste.

The extreme Left has demonstrated vocally, and last week a protester's truck would have hurled Molotov cocktails into the Imperial Palace grounds but for a fault in the pitching mechanism. The Japan Socialist Party predictably denounced the November 10 official ceremony at which massed dignitaries will hear Prime Minister Miki laud the Emperor's reign — ostensibly on the grounds that it has lasted longer than any previous Emperor's.

Three impassioned cheers of "long live the Emperor" from a 10,000-strong audience are scheduled to ring through Tokyo's Martial Arts Hall. Commemorative postage staps, coins and cigarette packets are being issued and a national half holiday has been proclaimed.

The most conspicuous absence from the serried notables will be the governor of Tokyo, Ryokichi Minobe, who rejected an invitation to attend and caused a stir by truthfully explaining why.

Governor Minobe, who runs undoubtedly the most enlightened big city administration in Japan, said bluntly that he was not inclined, and never would be, to celebrate the Emperor's 50 years on the throne which include the 20 dark pre-war years when the Emperor was recognised as the inviolable sovereign. He surmised that many people felt the same way.

Minobe, 72, whose father was persecuted before the war for criticizing the Emperor's divine status, is the boldest of the small group of pblic figures who declined invitations to the official rites. "Too busy" was the excuse of the mayor of Yokohama and the governors of Saitama and Kanagawa Prefectures. "Illness" was the pretext given by the governor of Kyoto. The Communist-backed mayor of Osaka accepted to attend.

A Socialist Party member representing an Okinawan constituency said that because of the countless lives lost in Okinawa during the war he could not approve a ceremony in honor of the Emperor.

Less moderately, but generally protected by anonymity, left-wing radicals have described the 50 years of Hirohito's reign as an era of imperialism and atrocities against other Asians. In anticipation of extremist demonstrations, the heavy police guard around the Imperial Palace has been further reinforced.

But it was above all Governor Minobe's implied charge that the Emperor was the culprit for the war which touched raw nerves, and focused attention on issues deliberately blurred in post-war Japan.

The Emperor was reduced by the allied occupation from divine to moral status. But unwritten taboos, enforced by ultra-rightists' threats, continue to govern what may be said or written about the imperial family. Incredibly even today the Japanese fear to utter the name Hirohito, an unpardonable and dangerous lese-majeste. Foreigners find such feudal remnants difficult to comprehend.

HIROHITO . . . atrocities remembered

School textbooks are carefully doctored to present the 75-year-old Emperor as a mild, scholarly figure obliged to rubber stamp war plans to which he was firmly opposed. Professional image makers have worked tirelessly on this myth which was originated late in the war by the General Staff's counter-intelligence agents and was fostered by General MacArthur who recognized the expediency of preserving Hirothito as a symbol of Japan.

While his underlings were brought to trial and in some cases executed, the question of Hirohito's war guilt was deliberately obscured. Relevant evidence was suppressed.

The Emperor himself was roped into the myth-making effort for the first time on September 22, 1975, when the palace arranged the first imperial press conference.

On the even of his American trip, when a foreign reporter asked whether he approved the attack on Pearl Harbour, Hirohito answered in his high-pitched voice that he had indeed received reports beforehand. "But I only received those reports after everything, down to the most minute detail, had been decided upon by the staff of High Command of the Fighting Services."

The official portrait of Hirohito as a harmless biologist has already been crushingly and convincingly demolished by historian David Bergamini who concluded in his 1971 book, The Imperial Conspiracy, that the Emperor not only approved but planned down to the last detail the war against China in 1937 and subsequent attack on the United States.

Many Japanese too have never accepted the smooth public relations job. Governor Minobe's refusal to help foster the myth that is being perpetuated by the events of November 10 earned him invective, and at least one threat to his life.

But slightly over half of those who called or wrote to his office applauded his decision. One man who lost a leg in the war said he "greatly appreciated" Minobe's stand. Others said the historical record should be put straight and the Emperor admit his responsibility.

Smug In Our Little Homes

By PAUL ST. PIERRE
The Sun

A great many people have burned their black masks, buried the pistols in the back yard and taken to real estate speculation, and a great many others don't mind.

Those of us who are comfortably housed are a majority in this area, and smug, like most majorities.

As housing costs remain at scandalously and totally unnecessary high levels, those who own homes are deluded into thinking they share in the profits, although if the only house you own is the one you live in there is no profit. You would be relatively no better off if housing prices double or worse off if they are cut in half.

The people who are hurting are those making their first purchases in the artificial market. Most of these are young couples who undertake 20, 25 and 35 years of crushing mortgage payments. They remain a minority, and while they suffer in silence, eating meat twice a week so they can meet the mortgage out of their two salaries, they get all the sympathy that silent minorities command. None.

Sooner or later they will become a sizeable minority or a majority, and when enough are embittered by the way they have been manipulated their anger will be spectacular.

The major cause of inflated house prices is the cost of land. This cost has been inflated by an artificial shortage. There is no real shortage. Ninety-five per cent of the land in B.C. is owned by the Crown, which is you and me. We are rich in land ownership beyond the dreams of citizens in any other province or state in the U.S.

Admittedly, it is not the only reason that houses in Vancouver sell for two or three times what they are worth. A reminder of this comes from George B. Miller, a land surveyor who has thought long about the bizarre housing market that we are being subtly conditioned to believe is normal.

The following are excerpts from a lengthy brief prepared by Mr. Miller for the Corporation of B.C. Land Surveyors.

He blames three groups for permitting land and housing prices to be inflated.

One is the developer. "The only facet that harms a developer is competition. The only instance of competition is when the supply is greater than the demand . . . Developers no longer go bankrupt in B.C. They still do in Washington State, where supply meets demand and equivalent serviced lots are much lower priced than here."

Municipalities and regional districts are to blame.

Even if they weren't starved for funds and lacking adequate support from senior governments the municipalities would still face a major handicap in speeding house developments — the owner-electors. "Most owner-electors are anti-development. They do not want any more schools or servicing expenses. They bought their homes when prices were low and they now enjoy a lucky equity. This incredibly selfish attitude has to be broken or else their children and grandchildren will be living together in that same house."

Mr. Miller proposes a 30-day time limit to be legislated to apply to any proposed subdivision in B.C. It is now not uncommon for municipal bureaucracies to stall decisions for more than a year.

"The foregoing suggestions would not require any more civil servants. There are already more than enough to do the job. It just means they would have to work more efficiently to achieve the 30-day deadline, which is easy. I state this fact since I am a former civil servant and hold a senior diploma in Municipal Administration."

Finally, Mr. Miller blames the senior governments.

"There has been little inspired leadership to date from either (federal or provincial) to assist the housing needs of our citizens. The most import role of the senior governments is to help ensure an adequate supply, to keep prices reasonable and not to allow strangleholds on cities or municipalities by bureaucratic shortsightedness such as exists at present." He mentions Prince George, to a lesser extent Kamloops and the State of Washington as examples of regions where government has assured enough supply of land to prevent speculative abuse.

If the provincial government is to release some of its abundant land to reduce speculation, he says "For heaven's sake do so by development contracts involving practising surveyors and engineers, not by government bureaucracies which simply take money out of the economy.

"Let free enterprise do the job. It was not free enterprise that developed this sorry state of affairs . . . It was government intervention at all levels, motivated by public pressure . . . We are in fact over-governed. More government agencies will lead to more chaos and stagnation."

Mr. Miller's suggestions seem impressive but, since most of us owner-electors are warm and comfortable, since our children haven't yet come back home with their grandchildren to seek shelter, he is talking only for a minority and not many will heed what he says. Yet.

STRAY FEATHERS

harold hosford

If you think frustration is something peculiarly human, consider this:

At the foot of our street there is a Douglas fir, not a big one by record standards but just about the biggest one around our place. How many years it has stood there is anyone's guess but I'd put it somewhere between two and three hundred.

For most of those years that grand old tree has stood almost impervious to the fussing and rummaging of homo sapiens around its base, but recently a basement for a house chewed into one side of its roots while on the other two streets intersecting at an odd angle did their part to make its future uncertain.

The most obvious result of all this pecking and poking can be seen in the top two-thirds of the old tree. From about 30 or 40 feet up, its branches stand gaunt and bare. While this has been construed as an unfortunate development by me, it has become apparent that some of the other forms of life that reside in our part of town, particularly some birds, do not share my feelings. The uppermost dead branches of that tree have become a meeting place for just about every passing high-flier.

Most mornings, on my way to catch the bus, I glance up and subconsciously note the current occupants. Often they're a bunch of starlings making unstarling-like noises, but occasionally robins, crows, crossbills or siskins stop by.

* * *

One morning recently my subconscious inventory noted, but did not consider, a brief flurry of birds at the top of the old tree as a dozen starlings and two crows decamped in some haste.

Once at the bus stop, and now with more time to consider the situation at the top of the big tree more fully, I saw that a pigeon-sized, falcon-like bird had the place to itself. Ah! I thought. That's what spooked the starlings!

With no binoculars, I could only guess what the bird was so I guessed either a Merlin or a Peregrine Falcon.

Well, the bus was a little late that morning, so I watched. Before long it became apparent that the habitual stop-off for many passing birds was being passed-up this morning because nobody wanted to challenge the present occupant.

Life of a Bird Not Smooth

It was hilarious to see little bands of starlings hurtling toward the view-point only to veer off at the last moment, make a few nervous circles around the tree, then scuttle off to settle nearby in some lesser and obviously not-so-acceptable perch.

By the time my bus arrived I was convinced that whatever that bird was, sitting atop my Douglas-fir, it was sure frustrating the aspirations of a lot of birds that morning.

Now, let's shift to an evening jaunt along Ogden Point and an equally frustrated Pelagic Cormorant.

* * *

I first noted the cormorant diving inside the breakwater and stopped to watch. After about the third dive it surfaced with what looked like a clingfish in its beak — at least the fish seemed very large-headed. Expecting its quick dispatch, I was surprised to find the cormorant in difficulty; the fish, its big head apparently getting in the way, refused to be swallowed.

Four times the cormorant lost his catch and had to make a brief dive after it. Three times more he caught it but on the fourth he was down for what seemed like an excessively long time.

At last he re-appeared, this time beside a log boom, but once again with his clingfish. Having lost the fish four times already and having expended a lot of energy to bring it back each time, the cormorant had obviously decided on a change of venue for the struggle. With the fish firmly held in his beak, he clambered out on to the logs.

Safely out of the water, or so the cormorant may have thought, he dropped the fish and began pecking at it, to stop its struggling I guessed. On the logs he could conveniently do this; in the water he'd lost the fish every time.

Well, to make a short story shorter, it just was not that cormorant's day (or maybe it was the clingfish's day) because after hammering at the fish for a few seconds and chasing it along the boom for several feet, the fish flipped into the water and was gone.

This time the cormorant just sat and peered into the water for a moment, then settled back, spreading its wings to dry, and seemed to assume a what-the-hell attitude.

So, you think you've got troubles.?

Trade with Japan Could Use a Boost

By AL FORREST

Times Business Editor

A Japanese trade mission was in Victoria this week as part of a campaign to turn Canada into a major trading partner.

A report released by the visiting delegation showed Canada accounts for only about three per cent of Japan's export and six per cent of its imports, despite the strategic locations of the two countries.

Hisao Makita, leader of the Japanese delegation, said the mission would try to break the traditional trading pattern by encouraging Canadians to sell manufactured goods in Japan and not just raw materials as at present.

"We shall be discussing this matter with our business friends here and with government officials, hoping that we may be of some help by, for instance, giving some pointers about the marketing of manufactured goods in Japan."

Trade between the two countries has doubled in the past five years and is still growing.

But Canada remains a very minor market in Japan's trade pattern.

About 50 per cent of Japan's imports come from Asian countries. These account for $27.7 billion out of a total of $56 billion.

The United States is the second major source of imports, accounting for $11 billion. Europe is third at $5.6 billion and Australia fourth at $4.6 billion.

Canada is far back in fifth place at $2.4 billion.

Although statistically small, this trade with Japan is important to the west because most of the products come from British Columbia and the prairies.

In 1975, Canada's main export product to Japan was coal, which was worth $455 million. In second place at $251 million is prairie wheat while B.C. copper worth $225 was the third most important export from Canada.

Other important exports, in order, were rapeseed $194 million, wood pulp $149 million, barley $125 million and hemlock lumber $89 million.

Zinc, beef, iron ore and lead are also important exports.

On the other side of the trade ledger, Japan sold only $1.1 billion worth of goods to Canada out of a total sale of $54.5 billion during 1975.

Predictably, Asia was the main market with sales of $20 billion. The U.S. was second at $10.9 billion and Europe third at $10.1 billion.

Cars are the main product sold in Canada by Japan with TV sets, textiles and steel pipe also important.

In 1975 sales of Japanese cars in Canada totalled $158 million while an additional $72 million was earned from the sale of trucks and buses.

TV sets, radios and record players acounted for $81 million, other electronic products brought in $79 million and textiles produced revenues totalling $77 million.

Iron and steel products, cameras, chemicals and tractors were also important in the Japanese export program to Canada.

All this is very minor, however, compared with $20 million in sales to Asia. Sales to Australia at $2.2 billion were exactly twice as important as the $1.1 billion exports to Canada.

The Japanese mission is scheduled to arrive in Toronto tonight and a series of meetings are planned there Monday. The delegation moves to Montreal on Tuesday and concludes in Ottawa on Thursday.

BONDS BYPASS WALL STREET

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Exxon Corp. announced Friday it is bypassing the traditional Wall Street financial houses and seling $54.9 million in pollution-control bonds directly to the public.

Although direct public sales are often held by the U.S. government, Exxon's move marks the first time in memory that a giant corporation has used this method of financing.

Observers here said Wall Street could be expected to look with disfavor on Exxon's sale, since it could spell doom to the elaborate system of brokers and investment bankers if other corporations followed suit.

The bonds technically are being sold by the Gulf Coast Waste Disposal Authority of Texas, which makes them tax exempt.

European Loan Backs James Bay

MONTREAL (CP) — Hydro-Quebec has negotiated a loan of $125 million (U.S.) on the European capital market to be used for construction of the massive James Bay hydroelectric project in northwestern Quebec.

In a statement the publicly owned utility said the new debentures are guaranteeed unconditionally by the province of Quebec and will bear a 8½ per cent interest annually.

The debentures, to be offered at par and maturing in 10 years, will have an annual yield of about 8.33 per cent.

Hydro-Quebec intends to apply for a listing of the issue on the Luxembourg Stock Exchange, the statement said.

The cost of the now $16-billion hydroelectric project has increased substantially since preliminary estimates. The company has attributed increase mainly to inflation, environmental and technical factors.

WHEN CAN MORTGAGE BE PAID OFF?

When can you pay off your mortgage in advance? It all depends on the type of mortgage you have. The rules are very specifically laid out in the Interest Act.

If you own a conventional loan on your property, it may be paid off at any time after the first five years at a cost of three months interest.

If you have an NHA mortgage on your property, the rules vary with the source of the funds. If the money comes directly from C.M.H.C., the balance of the loan may be paid in full at any time without paying any interest penalty.

If the NHA mortgage funds come from an approved lender of C.M.H.C., and the loan is not in default, the borrower has the privilege of paying an additional amount of principal, not in excess of 10% of the original amount of the mortgage on the first, second or third anniversary or any month after the third anniversary. In each case, three months' interest must be paid as additional interest.

Tangiers Trip Queried

NANAIMO (CP) — The motive for a trip to Morocco marked Friday's B.C. Supreme Court murder trial of James Rodriguez Melendez.

Rodriguez, 25, formerly of Duncan, is charged with murder in the shootings last year of James Oldfield and Pamela Jones with whom he once lived.

Crown counsel David Williams entered evidence of three ferry tickets to Tangiers, Morocco. He asked why the trip was planned and Rodriguez said it was to buy leather goods.

Williams said Gerald Frank, a companion of Rodriguez, was in serious trouble with a group of Moroccans and suggested the trip was for another purpose.

Rodriguez said he did not make the trip but Williams said two tickets were missing from the folder.

After being questioned about a trip to Seattle, Rodriguez said he intended to return to Vancouver Island to explain the killings to police.

He said Frank, Wolfgang Brust and himself talked with Duncan police from an airport pay phone because they feared their hotel pay phone might be bugged by police.

Williams brought out a letter Rodriguez said he wrote — which told Louis Pena to dispose of Rodriguez' belongings left at the Pena residence. The letter was written in Seattle but Rodriguez repeated that no discussions of the killings had gone on.

"I just didn't want him to get into trouble because my stuff was there," Rodriguez said.

When asked why rifle butt parts were in Pena's burning barrel Rodriguez said he did not know.

Earlier in the trial mention was made of Rodriguez and Brust smoking marijuana during a trip from Victoria to Duncan.

Rodriguez admitted he used the drug. Friday afternoon the trial went into voir dire with the jury being excused until Monday.

Act Archaic—Mayor

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The British Columbia Municipal Act is archiac and impedes progress at the civic government level, Mayor Al Thompson said Friday.

"Frankly, I'd like to burn it," he said in an interview.

"People wonder why the city has to deal with topics five or six times in council and the reason is the municipal act."

Stewardess Decision Reserved

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice James Macdonald of the British Columbia Supreme Court has reserved judgment on an application by CP Air to prohibit a provincial human rights board of inquiry into the company's policy of not allowing flight attendants to fly after the 13th week of pregnancy.

CP Air counsel Norm Mullins said Thursday that if grounding pregnant stewardesses discriminates against women, then granting maternity leave discriminates against men.

He said if the CP Air policy is found to be discriminatory, then the maternity leave section of CP Air's collective agreement with the stewardesses would be invalid.

Stewardesses are laid off after the 13th week of pregnancy and offered ground jobs — if the jobs are available. They are reinstated to flying duties after the baby is born.

The complaint to the board was brought by CP Air stewardess Jacqueline Frances Culley of Vancouver and the Canadian Air Line Flight Attendants Association.

Herbicide For Weeds Studied

A spokesman for the provincial environment department said Friday the committee of three scientists investigating the possible use of 2, 4-D in Okanagan Lake is still reviewing the situation.

Environment Minister Jim Nielsen appointed the committee Oct. 18 to look into the possible usage of the herbicide to prevent the continued rapid spread of the Eurasian water milfoil weed.

The spokesman said the committee does not have a time limit in which to prepare its report. It had earlier been stated that the committee had recommended the use of 2, 4-D, but the department spokesman said the endorsation was premature.

Driver Jailed

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — Crawford Erickson was jailed Friday for 14 days after pleading guilty to impaired driving. RCMP said he had an alcohol reading of 0.38 per cent after he was found slumped over the wheel of a tractor which was straddling the railway tracks at Taylor, nine miles south of here.

Pair Committed

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Two Matsqui prisoners have been committed for trial on murder charges while a third was discharged for lack of evidence. The charges were laid after prisoner Arthur Gerald Wadlow, 26, was stabbed while in his cell July 15. Committed for trial were Thomas Robert Iton, 21, and Andries Van-Amerongen, 20. Grant Ronald Andrews, 19, was discharged.

Pact Ratified

PENTICTON (CP) — Packing house workers in the Okanagan Valley have strongly ratified a new one-year contract with the British Columbia Federated Shippers Association.

The contract provides for a six per cent increase on packers' piece-work rates and a 42-cent an hour increase for all other employees.

FRUIT CROP WEATHERS THE SUMMER

KELOWNA (CP) — Another good year for most British Columbia fruit crops is predicted by the B.C. agriculture ministry.

The ministry says in a report that most crops appear to have come through well despite a bad summer.

The 1977 cherry crop is expected to show a drop of five million pounds from 1975. The crop this year was estimated at 17 million pounds and next year's forecast is 16 million pounds.

The apple crop is forecast to increase by 10 million pounds from this year's estimated 350 million pounds.

Pears might decline from this year's 45 million pounds and peaches are expected to show an increase of about 1.5 million pounds from this year's 46 million pounds.

Northland to Get Its Subsidy

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government has decided to continue paying subsidies to Northland Navigation Co. Ltd. for shipping to remote communities on the British Columbia coast, a spokesman for Transport Minister Otto Lang said Friday.

David Cuthbertson, executive assistant to Lang, said subsidies will continue until a cost-sharing agreement can be reached with the provincial government. Ottawa previously had decided to cancel the subsidies on Sunday.

Cuthbertson said Lang believes the services offered by Northland should pay their own way but he wants to ensure that the company's passenger services will be continued through the winter.

Cuthbertson said Allan Campbell, chairman of the Canadian Transport Commission's water transport committee, and Roger Marsham, director general of the ministry's ferries branch, were to meet with Northland representatives here this weekend to discuss the government's change of heart.

Northland received a $3.7-million subsidy in 1975-76 but its request for a $4.5-million subsidy in 1976-77 was initially rejected when the government decided to cancel subsidies altogether.

"The minister is very much aware that there is a lot of concern about cancellation of passenger services on the west coast and about laid-off employees," said Cuthbertson.

The minister also was concerned because other companies have indicated they can operate a similar freight service without federal assistance, the aide said.

Capt. Lou Fleming, president of Northland, said about 150 employees have been given layoff notices and it was concern for them and the northern communities that prompted the company to meet with government officials.

"But they (the federal government) have succeeded in destroying our shipping services," said Capt. Fleming. "Now that they realize their credibility is shot to pieces, they are looking to Northland to pull them through their dilemma."

He said that the company had heard nothing from Lang about its subsidy request since Sept. 10 and had put its three vessels up for sale. The 12-passenger Skeena Prince already has been sold and currently is makig its last run for Northland.

Gains, Losses Detailed If Peace R. Developed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A report to the British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority says one more dam — not two — on the Peace River would do the least damage to environment and residents of northeast B.C.

The report covers all possibilities of Hydro dams on the Peace from the present Site One dam construction.

It was co-ordinated by Thurber Consultants of Victoria, with assistance from B.C. Hydro, provincial and federal government agencies and other private consultants.

The major points of the expert's findings are:

—If two dams are built, major economic benefits would occur in the communities of Fort St. John and Dawson Creek;

—Two dams would flood an estimated total of 43,000 acres of land and watercourse causing significant environmental and social losses;

—Substantial relocation of existing roads, bridges, petroleum and natural gas facilities will be necessary if any dam is built;

—Further studies of archeological sites, land use planning, citizen relocation, recreation potential, fish and wildlife management are essential.

"Since adverse environmental and social impacts are dependent on the amount and location of flooding, a Site C 1510 dam downstream of the Moberly River, plus a Site E 1342, is judged to have the lowest losses and greatest benefits of the various alternatives studied," said the synopsis.

"A Site C dam alone would be even more desirable from an environmental and social standpoint."

Site C is more than 50 miles downstream from the W. A. C. Bennett Dam on the Peace and Site E is approximately 40 miles below Site C.

The numbers 1510 and 1342 refer to the potential reservoir levels calculated in feet above sea level.

If the Peace is developed, the report predicts "economic benefits to the region would be driven from the employment of resident and migrant workers on the construction projects.

"Although these benefits would be short-term, they could amount to $300 million of direct income and $180 million in indirect income over the construction period of both dams.

"These benefits would be accompanied by significant losses in the agriculture, social and wildlife sectors that would require specific mitigation and compensations measures."

Market gardens and farm land up 1,510 feet above sea level would be lost to reservoir flooding, the report said.

"At least 140 families would be required to relocate by the basic development proposal and alterations to access roads and farm operations can be expected on private and leased land," said the report.

"Wildlife losses would centre around the loss of winter habitat for moose and other ungulates and the displacement of aquatic animals."

The report investigators also uncovered a significant archeological site.

Weather May Be Tie Breaker In U.S. Presidential Race

Associated Press

President Ford says the 1976 presidentail campaign is "neck-and-neck" and Jimmy Carter sees the race as so close that the weather may be a key factor in deciding who leads the United States for the next four years.

Ford campaigned from Milwaukee to St. Louis to Houston on Friday. He declared he had tied Carter, and labelled the Democrats as "frantic, frustrated and frenzied."

Carter, heading west in his final trip of the campaign, said in Toledo, Ohio, that the race is "very close. The polls show it is so close that the outcome could be decided by whether it rains or not."

A Harris Poll for ABC News showed Ford within one percentage point of Carter. The results, announced Friday, give Carter 45 per cent to Ford's 44 per cent, with four per cent backing former Senator Eugene McCarthy and seven per cent undecided.

Harris said the poll was based on interviews with 2,891 eligible voters from 300 precincts across the country.

Harris said the sample showed Carter with a lead of 55-39 per cent in the South and a 43-41 per cent lead in the East. Ford was ahead 48-40 in the Midwest and 50-41 in the West.

The Democratic nominee has campaigned hard on economic issues and he quickly leaped on government statistics released Friday showing a decline for the second straight month in figures designed to predict economic developments.

The government said the index of leading economic indicators fell seven-tenths of one per cent.

Carter said those figures "mean more hard times ahead" unless there is an end to "Republican mismanagement of the economy." But Ford said he was not disturbed by the report, saying the country is "winning the battle against inflation."

As Ford declared the race deadlocked, his aides were apparently trying to use on Carter the strategy of claiming to have won before any ballots are counted. That strategy worked when Ford used it to defeat Ronald Reagan at the Republican convention.

BLUE TAINT CUT FROM FORD FILM

NEW YORK (UPI) — A man who helped produce TV ads for President Ford's election campaign was fired by the White House when it was revealed he was also working on an allegedly pornographic film, officials said Friday.

Michael Scott Goldbaum, who lives in Great Neck, N.Y., and also works under the name Michael Scott, is the head of Vivien Productions whose "Campaign '75 Special Radio Group" tape recorded statements by Ford and man in the street reactions for use in Ford commercials.

The New York Post reported Friday that Goldbaum is also involved in the production of "Philosophy in the Bedroom," a film which the paper described as "a hard-core sex film."

Philip Angel, a vice-president of Ford's media campiagn, said Friday that he fired Goldbaum, who was hired at $300 per day by Bailey Deardourff and Wyre, a Washington consulting firm which is supervising Ford's media campaign.

The paper said an ad placed by Vivien Productions in Backstage, a show-business publication, announced "Casting for film — beautiful young girl, must be dancer, able to pass for 15 years old with no makeup. Must have very long hair and very light skin. Nudity involved. Must be over 18 with proof of age."

The paper also said applicants were told they must perform oral sex while stand-ins would do "penetration" scenes.

Goldbaum told the paper the flim was "not a dirty movie . . . well, I'm not going to say to you I think it's a film Jerry Ford would go see; Ford is incredibly square, that's one of the beautiful things about him."

Korean Scandal Called Third Rate Thriller

SEOUL, South Korea — A high-ranking aide to President Park Chung Hee said Friday that the U.S. investigation into a pay-off scheme allegedly ordered by South Korea's ruler was nothing but "a third-rate thriller."

When reminded of former President Richard Nixon's original characterization of the Watergate break-in, Foreign Policy Assistant Kim Kyong Won added, "yes, Watergate was a third-rate burglary and this is a third-rate thriller."

Characterized by Koreans as their country's "Henry Kissinger," Kim ridiculed Washington Post reports on the scandal as "preposterous" and dismissed any prospect that it could cause long-term harm to America's relationship with South Korea.

In a lengthy interview — the first to be granted by an important government official since news of the investigation broke last week — Kim sought to minimize the importance of the case and repeated official denials that President Park directed the $500,000 to $1 million a year corruption scheme, as claimed by federal investigators quoted in The Washington Post.

"It is not a real event," he said. "It is an event invented by media — by, for and of the media — and I find it difficult to take a serious interest in it."

The foreign policy expert said that even if true, the scandal would not override the hard realities of enduring and interlocking interests which link the United States and South Korea.

CANADA, U.S. SHARE ALASKA PAVING JOB

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — A formal agreement will be signed next week between the United States and Canada for paving a 205-mile section of the Alaska Highway and a 117-mile stretch of the Haines Road, Governor Jay Hammond said Friday.

Hammond said representatives of the two countries will meet in Ottawa Tuesday to complete the agreement which calls for the U.S. to assume the full cost of the project.

Congress has appropriated $58.6 millin for the job, but officials believe an additional appropriation will be needed because of increased costs.

The project calls for paving of the Alaska Highway from the Alaska Border to Haines Junction in the Yukon and the Haines Road from the junction to Porcupine, Alaska about 42 miles north of Haines.

Teamster Ducks Kidnap Charge

NEW YORK (AP) — A judge threw out federal kidnap and murder conspiracy charges Friday against New Jersey Teamsters Union leader Anthony (Tony Pro) Provenzano, saying the government is 10 years too late with its indictment. Three codefendants also won dismissals.

The four were accused in a 1961 scheme to rub out Anthony (Three Finger Brown) Castellito, secretary-treasurer of Teamsters Local 560 in Union City, N.J., when Provenzano was its president.

The indictment was not returned until last June 22 and U.S. District Judge Charles Stewart ruled that the five-year statute of limitations long since had expired.

Provenzano was not entirely off the hook, however.

A justice department spokesman, William Aronwald, said the dismissal will be appealed.

SMOKE SCREEN

DETROIT (AP) — Smoke billowed through a busy terminal at Detroit metropolitan airport Friday, injuring six persons and delaying flights for two hours.

"The smoke was so thick that people did not know where the exits were," said Archie McDonald, operations assistant at the big airport. "I kept yelling to them, 'Follow me and I will lead you to the doors'."

Two sheriff's deputies and an American Airlines employee were overcome by smoke, and three firemen suffered minor injuries when their truck overturned as they raced to the blaze. All were admitted to hospital.

The fire broke out in the air ducts and was confined there. The cause was not immediately known.

Airport fire department officers said actual fire damage was light.

The blaze broke out at 6:05 p.m. when the airport was busy with the usual Friday night rush. The fire was brought under control 30 minutes later, although smoke still drifted from the ducts, said a spokesman for the Wayne County sheriff's department.

Sex Experts Seek Acceptance

MONTREAL — Sex researcher Dr. William Masters says it is imperative sex therapists and researchers adopt a code of ethics so their field will be accepted at the level of the other sciences.

"We are deadly serious about the fact that intellectual integrity and security be established," Masters told nearly 1,300 delegates from over 20 nations Friday at the 4th International Congress of Sexology.

Masters said a multi-discipline conference will be held in January, 1978 in St. Louis to draw up a code of ethics. He said therapists and their techniques must be subject to constant review by their peers.

"Because we're new that doesn't mean we have to be bad," he said. "If we grow in dignity we will rapidly be accepted with the other disciplines."

WASHINGTON — A government official says Richard Nixon has been allowed to make copies of some of his White House tapes but that President Gerald Ford has not been given access to any of them, despite inferences drawn by a Texas lawmaker.

Rep. Jack Brooks, a Democrat who heads the House government operations committee, Friday said White House personnel copied some of the tapes earlier this month, about the same time questions were raised on Ford's role in blocking a 1972 Watergate investigation.

Richard R. Albrecht, general counsel for the treasury department, sent a letter to Brooks in which he said he wanted to correct "the false and misleading inferences contained in the press release issued by your office."

LONDON — A 51-year-old career policeman who was still a detective sergeant 13 years ago has been named to Britain's top police job — head of Scotland Yard as commissioner of London's metropolitan police.

David McNee, an elder of the Church of Scotland and "strict disciplinarian" comes from Glasgow where criminals and police officers alike called him "the hammer" for his anti-crime fervor.

NEW DELHI — The former king of the Himalayan state of Sikkim was discharged Friday from a nursing home in Calcutta where he was hospitalized for 10 days following an overdose of sleeping pills, a spokesman for the nursing home said.

Friends said former king Palden Thondup Namgyal Chogyal, 53, who had been flown to the nursing home in Calcutta, left for his apartment in the city upon discharge. He regained consciousness in the hospital on Oct. 24.

TORONTO — Col. Ernest J. Falle, 65, financial secretary of the Salvation Army for Canada and Bermuda, died of a heart attack at his home here Friday.

Falle had held the position of financial secretary since 1965 and was associated with the Salvation Army's operations in both countries.

During the Second World War, he played a key role in the Salvation Army's war services operations in Britain, Sicily, Italy, Normandy and northwestern Europe.

He later served as associate force director for all the organization's war service operations in Europe.

IMPERIA, Italy — It was 22 years ago that Ada Rossi took a written test for a job as a pharmacist in Rome. She just got a letter of congratulation — she got the job.

"It would have been nice to work in Rome. I even had to pay a fee for the job I won 22 years ago," she said.

She retired five years ago to this Italian Riviera town to devote her time to painting.

Mrs. Rossi said the lateness was due to bureaucratic delay rather than postal tardiness.

NEW YORK — Composer-conductor Leonard Bernstein and his wife of 25 years have separated, says The Daily News. Bernstein, 58, and his wife, Chilean-born actress Felicia Montealegre, have four children.

EDMONTON — Otto Pretzlaff, 51, will be staying at Spy Hill jail near Calgary for an additional four months because he applied for and received unemployment insurance benefits while serving a six-month sentence.

Pretzlaff, formerly of Edmonton, was convicted Thursday of four charges under the Unemployment Insurance Act and was sentenced to four months on each charge to be served concurrently after serving his present term.

Court was told Pretzlaff made false statements to obtain $791 in unemployment benefits during the first three months of 1975 while working as a carpenter.

Early this year, while serving a sentence at Fort Saskatchewan jail, he was found in possession of a $246 unemployment insurance cheque.

Court was told he applied for benefits, stating he was "ready, able and willing to work" when, in fact, he was in jail.

YEGG TALKS

NICE, France — An ex-paratrooper confessed Friday to masterminding the $8 million to $10 million "sewer gang" robbery of a Riviera bank.

Police said he told them he gave his share of the loot to an international group of extreme right-wing militants identified as La Catena — the chain.

Albert Spaggiari, a 40-year-old former paratrooper who fought in Indochina and Algeria, was formally charged with robbing the Nice branch of Societe Generale last July 17-18. Police have said "an important part" of the loot has been recovered.

Halloween . . . action time for witches like Mrs. Jean Kozocari

WITCH IS SURPRISING

Not an Ounce of Mean in Jean

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Jean Kozocari destroys the notion witches are sinister toothless old hags with nothing but meanness in their hearts.

She's the opposite of all that. Yet she insists she's a witch.

You'd think she'd have a tough time making friends, getting married, or having a family. But no. She leads a seemingly normal life in the heart of Oak Bay.

"A happy housewife," she calls herself. Of course, it helps to have an understanding husband. And her four children, aged 10 to 26, well, they accept the fact their mother's perhaps a little unusual.

About the only complaint is from her oldest boy. He tends to have difficulty keeping a steady girlfriend.

"The girls seem to scatter when he tells them his mother is a witch," she chuckles.

Fortyish, short, jovial and as round as Buddah, Mrs. Kozocari has been a witch for as long as she can remember.

Her grandfather was one. Her great grandmother was one too, and Mrs. Kozocari says she can trace witches in her family all the way back to 1430 in England and France.

(Men are witches in her cult; warlock is an Americanism she disdains).

To Mrs. Kozocari, witchcraft is a religion, with deep roots in pre-Christian tradition and beliefs.

"It means craft of the wise," she says. "On the other hand some say it's the craft of the wicked. It all depends on whose camp you're in."

She believes witches can control and manipulate the forces of nature . . . but only if the end result is noble.

"Our responsibility is to suppress evil and accentuate good."

★

Next to the summer festival of Lammas on Aug. 1, there is no more important occasion in a witch's life than Halloween.

It's the time of year when the feminine principle in nature turns over her control to the male element for the winter months, she says.

It's a highly psychic period, the one time in the year when the gate between this world and the next is not manned. An ideal moment to contact the dead.

This year is expecially important because it marks the 50th anniversary of Houdini's death.

She says many covens (gatherings of witches) will be trying to communicate with the great magician.

Like all witches, Mrs. Kozocari says, she has special abilities. She can prophesize, conjure spirits, exorcise demons and remove spells. She can cast spells too, but anyone can do that, she adds, since a spell is just a curse.

Most of her work is devoted to teaching parapsychology and helping people haunted by ghosts or poltergeists.

Because of her growing reputation (she once received a postcard from Japan addressed simply: Jean Kozocari, Witch, Canada), she is in constant demand.

At her home at 2051 Hampshire, she carries out her study and research. From the outside the house looks like any other on the block, except maybe the paint — blood-red, her favorite color next to black.

Inside, the decor is — different.

There's Hoitai, for instance, a porcelain Buddah. It once belonged to a Victoria area policeman who was having terrible luck. Mrs. Kozocari concluded the cause was Hoitai. So she brought the malevalent Buddah into her home and conducted various "cleansings." Now he's almost pleasant, she says.

Then there's a small wooden cross with a crude legless figure carved on its face.

"It's a stake," she says picking it up off a window ledge. "From Transylvannia. It should have gone through a vampire's heart."

Of course she has a Siamese cat too. Asmodeus. In witch lore Asmodeus is the male demon of lust and sexuality.

Mrs. Kozocari is unusual in that she publicly declares she's a witch. Most don't.

"I'm the only loudmouth in the group," she quips.

★

Whether it has been her influence or an indication of a larger trend, witchcraft is enjoying a surge in popularity.

Between 1850 and 1975 there were never more than five covens in Victoria, says Mrs. Kozocari who moved here from Ontario in 1961.

Now there are dozens of covens. Most comprise only two or three members and none have more than 13 members, the optimum number in forming a witch's circle.

She estimates there are about 80 practising witches on the Island,

Mrs. Kozocari will begin Halloween just like most other mothers in Victoria, handing out treats to children.

Shortly before 10 p.m., however, she'll pack up her things and head out to the secret meeting place of her coven.

There she'll don her witch's robes and sit and meditate and converse in low tones with the group, three other women and five men.

At precisely 1:20 a.m. Monday, the moment determined by the position of the stars as being most propitious, the witches will form a circle nine feet in diameter. Joining hands they will begin a series of ritual chants and dances.

The object is to raise a "cone of energy." Once achieved, the group will direct it to whatever effect they had decided upon earlier in the evening. It could be to help someone who needs healing. It could be to remove spells. It could be to care for someone who has died during the year.

The circle may last half an hour. It could take all night.

When the energy is spent and their mission done, the group will depart their separate ways. The drive home won't be by broomstick, but by car.

Alas, such is the way with modern-day witches.

Guy Will Win Says Schibli

The president of the Victoria Labor Council said today he thinks Len Guy will win by a 2 to 1 margin in the bitter battle for the top labor post in B.C. two weeks from now.

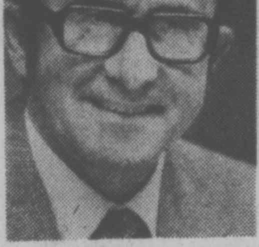
But John Schibli said the council's three delegates go to the annual convention of the B.C. Federation of Labor in Vancouver Nov. 15 to 19 without instructions on how to vote.

Guy, current federation secretary, is up for re-election and is opposed by Art Kube, regional director of education for the Canadian Labor Congress.

Kube is drawing support from two of the province's major unions, the International Woodworkers of America and the B.C. Government Employees Union. Together they represent about a third of the federation's 320,000 members.

IWA regional president Jack Munro said earlier there is a serious rift in the provincial trade union movement and it is going to have to suffer a little bloodletting on the leadership issue.

Schibli said it would have been extremely difficult to get a consensus from local labor council delegates on which man to support and could have generated a split within the organization.



SCHIBLI

In such situations, the general policy is to leave to each delegate the voting choice after hearing candidates, he said. About 500 voting delegates are expected at the convention.

Secretary Larry Ryan is the sole delegate financed by the council. Expenses of the other two delegates, Linda Baker from the B.C. Government Employees Union and Elgin "Scotty" Neish from the United Fishermen's Union, are paid by their respective unions.

Schibli said delegates usually meet with their own union caucus and may be instructed how to vote. But in the final analysis the choice is theirs because voting is by secret ballot.

The provincial labor leadership issue was raised only briefly in a labor council meeting and not debated after it was explained the question is one for individual unions to decide, he added.

The Victoria council has about 120 unions with a total membership of 18,000 affiliated with it.

Schibli, who is also president of the Victoria local of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, said it is all but certain the building trades will support the incumbent, Guy.

FISHNET MISHAP DELAYS JETFOIL

The pilot of the Boeing jetfoil Flying Princess and some luckless Victoria fisherman both learned a lesson Friday.

For the fisherman the lesson was you don't drop your nets in the path of the jetfoil.

For the pilot, it was that the screen over the vessel's intake valve won't stop a net from being sucked in and gumming up the works.

The craft had just begun its return trip to Seattle when at about 4:30 p.m. just outside the Inner Harbor it suddenly slowed down.

It managed to make it back under its own power to the dock where divers were sent down.

They found a net wound up inside the intake valve. (The Flying Princess is propelled by sucking water in and rapidly pushing it out).

It took a couple of hours to get the net unwound and by 8 p.m. the jetfoil finally left.

Passengers didn't mind the wait. They were given complimentary food and bar service on the two-hour run home to Seattle.

Union VP Quits In Frustration

The vice-president of the inside workers' union at City Hall announced Friday his resignation from his union job saying the frustrations in routine dealings with the city personnel department are intolerable.

Rick Doyle, 32, who works in the data processing division, was elected vice-president of Local 388 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees a year ago.

His decision to step down has been building up "an awful long time," he said, because "it is pretty impossible to do the job we were elected to do."

Doyle cited two examples of the delays the union has experienced.

Last Aug. 3, the local sought a ruling on whether one employee was entitled to a cost-of-living allowance. Nearly three months later, and after several meetings with the city manager, the city's answer went out in a letter today.

The second case involved a query on whether two parking meter service men were entitled to free uniform laundering. The union submitted the request seven weeks ago and has only just been informed that the city agrees to pick up the laundry tab.

Again, he said, several meetings costing "hundreds of bucks" were necessary to thrash out the matter.

"It's a battle to get a simple answer to a simple queson," Doyle said.

Sometimes the only way to extract an answer seems to be to file a grievance, but that should not be necessary and in any case the procedure takes too long, he said.

End to Bentick 'Bombing' Urged by Shoreline Expert

The department of national defence should stop despoiling Bentick Island, one of the most attractive islands in the capital region, an expert on shoreline management has urged.

"What's the sense of blowing craters on a beautiful island" said Wolf Bauer. "There's no need for that today — not with all those long-range missiles and modern weapons."

He was referring to Bentick Island, situated off the coast of Metchosin between Becher Bay and Peddar Bay. It is owned by DND and has been used for grenade training by the armed services.

Comparing the island to Discovery and Chatham off Oak Bay, he said Bentick, as well as adjacent DND shoreline property, is "a most important resource area."

"Bentick and the surrounding DND property should be retained as recreational area — as a park," he said. "The entire complex is one of the most scenic areas in the capital region and one which is close to the urban centre."

Bauer, a Seattle engineer who was engaged by the Capital Regional District to make a study on shoreline management, was speaking at a public meeting on a shore-resource study he carried out this summer between Wolf Island and Fort Rodd Hill.

He told the meeting that the road at the beginning of Esquimalt Spit and running along the shoreline to the gravel pit should be closed.

The entire area could be developed as a picnic site to tie in with the Colberg spit, he said.

"Trees could be planted here and there and you would have a beautiful shoreline park."

He warned if the road is not closed, rubble and rocks will have to be dumped along the beach to protect the thoroughfare from being eroded away.

"So you will end up with just another rubble beach just to keep a road intact — a road which is not necessary." he said.

Juveniles Held In Break-Ins

Oak Bay police said today they have apprehended two juvenile boys age 13 and 14 who may be responsible for as many as 13 break-ins in Victoria and Oak Bay over the past three months.

The two, both from Victoria, are expected to appear in Family Court sometime next week.

A police spokesman said more than $1,500 worth of stolen goods has been recovered following a lengthy investigation.

The goods include: A portable engine stolen from B.C. Hydro, an engine stripped from a motorcycle at Royal Jubilee Hospital parking lot, a stereo set and tapes taken from a truck parked at Horwood Motors Ltd., 810 Johnson, clothes and a camera stolen from a truck parked on Cedar Hill Crossroads near K-Mart, five bicycles from various locations in Oak Bay, a quantity of liquor, fishing equipment and a portable rubber dinghy stolen from boats moored at Oak Bay Marina, a jigsaw from Banks Street school, tools from two construction sites, a steering wheel off an Austin-Healey parked at the Oak Bay Recreation Centre, a lawnmower and wheelbarrow taken from the rear of 2140 Cadboro Bay, tools from 1430 Newport and 10 fire extinguishers from five different Oak Bay apartment blocks.

Police also said that in a separate case a 17-year-old Victoria youth and a 16-year-old Vancouver boy have been jointly charged with two break-ins on Oct. 28 in homes at 595 Monterey and 963 Transit Road.

Blood Drive 'Disappointing'

A two-week campaign for blood donors in Greater Victoria ended Friday with a warning that local hospitals would be in trouble without donors from elsewhere in the province.

Red Cross spokesman Gerry Savage said today the 10 days of clinics yielding 2,156 donors. Minimum target had been 2,500.

The final clinic Friday, at Royal Jubilee Hospital, produced 165 donors, which Savage termed "disappointing."

All blood donated at clinics throughout the province during the year is distributed to hospitals through the Red Cross blood bank in Vancouver.

At the end of September hospitals in the Capital district had used 1,300 more units of blood than local donors had supplied, he said.

"We are dragging. We needed 2,500 to pick up the slack."

Last year for the first time in 20 years donors in Greater Victoria contributed almost 13,000 units of blood and matched the needs of hospitals in the district.

So far this year there have been about 10,000 units of blood donated. There will be 10 more days of clinics this year, five in November and another five in December.

If someone could only come up with a domestic-sized version of city-owned leaf-sucker, fall and falling leaves would be no problem. Big machine is shown gulping up Cook Street fallout.

Elderly Woman Killed

An elderly woman pedestrian died in Royal Jubilee Hospital Friday night five hours after being struck by a car at Richmond and Haultain.

Victoria police said Anna Moller Walker, 82, of 305-1928 Lee, was crossing the intersection when she was hit by a car driven by Norman Mitchell Bamford, 69, of 671 Linkleas.

The mishap occurred at 3:56 p.m.

Police said Mrs. Walker was the seventh person to die in traffic accidents in the city so far this year. Last year there were two fatalities and in 1974 there were 13.

JACK DONOHUE
. . . salutes are constant

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Wherever Jack Donohue goes these days, people stop to congratulate him on the fourth-place finish by Canada's basketball team in the Olympics at Montreal.

He doesn't have much time to stand around taking bows, however. The national coach, whose home is Ottawa, is in town this weekend to conduct a coaching clinic today at the University of Victoria and act as guest speaker at tonight's grad game dinner.

He has also found time to speak to a service club luncheon, visit national team player Bill Robinson of Chemainus and take in Friday night's UVic Viking inter-squad game at the McKinnon gym.

He'll be back at McKinnon tonight to view the contest between coach Ken Shields' Vikings and the UVic grads, coached by Shields' predecessor, Gary Taylor. Tipoff is at 7:30.

Donohue, a 45-year-old native of New York City in his fourth year as national coach, doesn't get much rest when he's home. He's busy on several projects. Among them:

—Mapping out a program to certify basketball coaches at all levels ("It's long overdue and I'd like to see it start soon after Jan. 1");

—Laying the groundwork for a campaign boosting basketball as a recreational activity;

—Devising a way to compare and chart performances of players in different parts of Canada.

—Evaluating the national team.

The fans may be falling over themselves to congratulate Donohue on our Olympic success, but his mind is on what went wrong.

"Our goal was a medal and we didn't get it," he explained.

Some of the questions he's asking himself:

—"Did we have the best players on the team?" (He thinks so.)

—"Do we have to lose to Russia and the U.S., as we did in Montreal? (He doesn't think so.) What do we have to do to beat them?"

—"The things that went well — were they the result of something we did? In other words, what did we do that enabled us to finish fourth in the world?"

He doesn't have all the answers, but he will.

"We have to start all over again, scouting players who will be with us in 1979 and 1980. (The next Olympics are in Moscow in 1980). And I want to go to the States and talk to the guys who recruit players in wholesale lots and find out how they compare different players."

For example, a player scoring 10 points a game in a strong league might be a better prospect than one scoring 25 a game in a weak league. Donohue would like to include that factor in a comparison chart.

He would also like to visit East Germany, a country whose international athletic achievements are nothing short of remarkable.

"I'll have to find the time," Donohue said. "Money is no problem. The O'Keefe Sports Foundation and Sport Canada are a tremendous help that way."

Donohue served as a technical basketball advisor in West Germany in 1969, '70 and '71. At the same time, East Germany was preparing a national team.

"They lost out in pre-Olympic qualifying rounds and somehow they decided to drop the sport," Donohue said. "I haven't heard from them in basketball since then and I'd like to know why.

"Maybe some of the problems they had are similar to ours and we aren't aware of them. If we can avoid the problems they experienced, we can move more quickly toward completion of our goals."

There were close battles for the fans at UVic's McKinnon gymnasium Friday night as the Vikettes and Vikings played intrasquad games.

In the men's contest, Lee Edmondson scored 23 points to pace the Blues to a 60-57 decision over the Whites. Dale McLoughlin (17 points) was the leading sniper for the Whites.

The Vikettes made it even closer. In that one, Delphine Zarikoff dropped two free throws with two seconds remaining to snap a deadlock and give the Golds a 60-58 triumph over the Blues.

Tonight the Vikettes and Vikings play their annual games against UVic graduates at the McKinnon gym, the girls starting at 5:30 and the men at 7:30.

Mary-Anne's Debut Fourth at Sandown

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Girl jockeys appear on the racing scene from time to time. Some achieve a fleeting moment of glory, but the fad really hasn't caught hold in a permanent big-time way. They are still the exception rather than the rule.

Mary-Anne Baumgartner is the latest to appear at Sandown and the first jockette to ride here in two years. Friday was her baptismal on a recognized track. Mary-Anne didn't crown her debut with a victory, but she didn't do badly nonetheless. She finished fourth on the four-year-old filly Hey Teacher in the second race.

Mary-Anne has been galloping horses for a few years now, and her background probably gives the reason why. Her father, Pete Baumgartner, is a trainer who worked at Exhibition Park this year and in past seasons. But it was at Calgary in 1974 where she had her official start galloping horses. "Lorne Dupont gave me the chance and showed me what to do," she said.

This summer she decided she would try the "B" circuit in the province. That's what is commonly referred to as "the bushes," the meets usually being held on holidays or weekends at such places as Princeton, Vernon, Osoyoos and Kamloops.

So she gave it a whirl. "I had about 25 mounts," she said, "and had five winners, four seconds and a couple of thirds."

Mary-Anne is 21 years of age and would like to continue riding. She has been working horses here since the Sandown meeting began, and she has also done many of the other menial chores around the stables "like mucking stalls," she said.

She weighs 108 pounds so that's no problem and she thinks she can make a go of it. All she wants is the chance. But opportunities don't come that easily with the abundance of jockeys there are at Sandown this fall. So she'll wait.

Otherwise, it was again a story of increased mutuel play over last year's corespending day. This time the handle was $196,122, $36,032 more than last year, and the crowd total on a pleasant afternoon was 2,683, also an increase.

Trainer Jim Haket's chestnut colt Winning Pool was easily the best in the Gay 90s Spare Rib House feature, an allowance for two-year-olds at six and one-half furlongs.

Winning Pool took the lead entering the backstretch and made every post a winning one to win handily in the good time of 1:23.1 over the dull strip. Autumn Purchase was second with the favored La Turin third. Winning Pool, ridden by jockey Garth Carter, paid $5.00, $3.10 and $2.20.

All will likely be back for next Saturday's running of the Juvenile Handicap and all should be fitter horses after their run Friday.

The jockey race after eight days is a dead heat. Apprentice Randy Dailey ran up three straight winners in the fourth, fifth and sixth races to take the lead from another apprentice Dale Manning, but Manning came right back in the seventh and ninth to bring them even again.

Each has 15 winners. Dailey was aboard Charlesville ($4.50), Hilldorin ($6.20) and Rad's Lady ($11.10). Manning had the winning mount on Panama Pete ($5.70) in the seventh and Arcos Pepe ($8.00) in the ninth.

Prices were moderate as mostly favorites romped down in front except in the third when Prince Richard ($12.20) closed with a rush to win and combine with Get Swift for a $67.80 quinella.

The Capital City Turf Club has announced a prize of $100 to the groom of the best-turned-out horse on all Saturdays and the Nov. 11 holiday card for the balance of the meeting. A New Look In Silks

A coy smile from a mud-spattered face and the only girl jockey at Sandown, Mary-Anne Baumgartner, 21, weighs out after a fourth-place finish on the four-year-old filly, Hey Teacher, in the second race on Friday's card. See story.

Four Good Reasons Kings Going for 13

If you're looking for on-ice reasons to explain Brandon Wheat Kings' glossy record in the Western Canada Hockey League this season, the four most obvious ones are goaltender Glen Hanlon, defenceman Brad McCrimmon and forwards Bill Derlago and Dan Bonar.

Coach Dunc McCallum would like to think he has balance but the four have been the leading lights in an early-season start that has seen Brandon lose only one of its first 14 games.

The once-tied Kings won their 12th game Friday in New Westminster by beating the defending champion Bruins 5-1.

Brandon tries for lucky 13 tonight in Memorial Arena against Victoria Cougars.

Hanlon, New Westminster's Carey Walker and Dave Parro of Saskatoon are waging a hot battle for goaltending honors. The Brandon stopper showed his value by turning in a sparkling, 36-stop performance in New Westminster.

Bonar, who scored his 100th WCHL goal last week, and Derlago have combined to score 30 goals so far.

But McCrimmon has been the biggest surprise for McCallum. He scored once and set up another goal Friday to run his individual point total to 25, two behind Victoria's Gary Lupul.

Lupul, McCrimmon, Portland forward Perry Turnbull and Lethbridge's Rocky Saganiuk are expected to be the leading candidates for rookie-of-the-year honors this season.

The Brandon rookie is running ahead of Winnipeg's Kevin McCarthy in point production. It's unexpected because McCarthy had been touted as having a chance to be the first defenceman to win WCHL scoring honors.

Kelly Ferner scored twice for Brandon while Randy Markewich and Murray Thompson added the others. Mike Wills scored Bruins' goal on a power-play to wreck Hanlon's shutout bid.

In other games Friday, Bruce Hamilton came up with his biggest night by scoring five times to spark Saskatoon to an 11-1 romp over Regina Pats; Portland, sparked by Tony Currie's three, stretched its undefeated streak to six games with an 8-2 victory over Medicine Hat, and Calgary Centennials dumped Lethbridge 6-3.

Brawl-Viewers To Pay Price

By The Canadian Press

Whatever happened to the 10-cent dance? Seven hockey players who waltzed one another around on the edge of a World Hockey Association brawl Friday night will find their next pay cheque $50 short.

The seven dropped their gloves and held on to one another while they took a close look at a brawl that took place in the first period of an 11-3 win by Winnipeg Jets over Edmonton Oilers.

This season a new rule says players on the ice can't even have a ringside seat at WHA brawls.

Players who fail to retreat to a neutral area when the fighting begins draw minor penalties. Those who hang around and drop their gloves, as the seven did Friday night, find themselves with an automatic misconduct and a $50 fine.

The seven—Winnipeg's Bill Lesuk, Ulf Nilsson and Perry Miller and Edmonton's Bob Russell, Glen Sather, Gene Peacosh and Al Hamilton—were keeping an eye on main eventers Anders Hedberg and Dave Dunn of the Jets and Dave Langevin of the Oilers.

Hedberg leaped up and went after Langevin after he was upended by the Edmonton player and slid into a goalpost. Langevin drew a double major, Hedberg a minor and a major and Dunn a major.

In Friday's other WHA games, Cincinnati Stingers downed San Diego Mariners 4-2, Indianapolis Racers defeated Quebec Nordiques 6-4 and New England Whalers topped Phoenix Roadrunners 5-1.

New Champ on Throne

SEGOVIA, Spain (AP) — Saensal Muangsurin of Thailand won the World Boxing Council's junior welterweight title from Miguel Velazquez of Spain when to stopped the 32-year-old champion in the second round of their scheduled 15-round bout Friday night.

Muangsurin, known as The Devil's Shadow, floored the champion four times in the second round before American referee Jimmy Dunn stopped the match and awarded Muangsurin the title by a technical knockout.

The 23-year-old boxer lost the title June 30 to Velazquez in a controversial fight.

McGee on Top By One Shot

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Jerry McGee had the lead but he was worried about Jerry Pate going into today's third round of the $125,000 Pensacola Open golf tournament.

"I've got to believe Pate is the man to beat," McGee said after his one-under-par 70 had given him sole control of the lead at 137 after Friday's second round.

"He had a phenomenal round today," McGee said. "Right now he's five shots back, but his knowledge of the course, particularly of the greens, ought to be worth four shots in the last two rounds."

Four shots may not be enough to catch the leaders. Pate's strong 67 left him at 142, tied for 22nd place.

McGee's effort, which had to overcome two consecutive bogeys followed by a drive he called "the ugliest thing you ever saw come off a golf club," put him at five under par for two trips.

Tommy Aaron, with a 71, was one shot back at 138. John Schlee and Bob Murphy, who had shared the first-round lead with Aaron and McGee, blew to 76s and were well back at 143.

Tied at 139, two back of the leader and defending champion, were Lee Elder, Frank Beard and Mac McLendon, winner of last week's Southern Open. Elder, who wore mittens against the blustery winds and biting cold, had a 71 and Beard shot a 70.

George Knudson of Toronto missed the cut by one stroke with a 77 for a 147 total.

Beware the Dockers!

Esquimalt Dockers may be getting their attack in high gear in perfect time for playoff battles.

It appeared that way Friday at Esquimalt when the Dockers turned on the power, drubbed Belmont Braves 5-1 and wrapped up a berth in the Division II championship playoff of the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League.

When the Dockers step out on the Royal Athletic Park pitch next Friday for the sudden-death division final, they'll be going against the division-leading Braves, who had clinched a playoff spot Thursday with a 3-2 decision over Claremont Spartans.

And with Larry Hobday out of his scoring slump, the Braves should be anticipating playoff problems.

Scoreless in his first nine contests this season, Hobday made it six tallies in two games by scoring three times for the Dockers in Friday's triumph. Larry Hohr and Jamie Ross also counted for Esquimalt and Rob Rosin connected for Belmont.

Another Division II decision went to St. Michaels University School by default when Parkland Panthers elected to skip a scheduled date at SMU because the independent school doesn't have regulation soccer goalposts, Coach Stan Hurton of SMU refused to play at a different site.

In a Division I game at Athletic Park Friday night, Reynolds Roadrunners pulled into a first-place deadlock with Oak Bay with a 6-0 conquest of Vic High Tyees.

Goals by Mike Newman, Ross Barnett, Ed Van Dyk, Scott Holroyd, Joe Thompson gave the Runners a 5-0 lead in the opening half. Lou Garroway added the second-half tally for Reynolds.

Ferrari Ponders Future of Lauda

Times News Services

Niki Lauda of Austria has postponed until next week his planned trip to Modena, Italy, for talks with Enzo Ferrari about his future in Formula 1 auto racing.

Lauda, who was expected in Modena on Friday, delayed his arrival to next Monday or Tuesday because rainy weather would have prevented a series of tests of new Ferrari car scheduled this weekend.

Relations between the factory and Lauda, Ferrari's No. 1 driver, have become tense since Lauda's controversial withdrawal during the rain-and-fog-plagued Grand Prix of Japan last Sunday, in which he lost the world title.

Lauda, who resumed racing last September after a near-fatal crash in Germany, said he withdrew after two laps because of poor visibility.

Although Ferrari said he trusted Lauda and that he had understood the decision to withdraw, there were reports the Italian factory was checking the drivers' market.

Ferrari already has dismissed Clay Regazzoni of Switzerland and is expected to replace him with Carlos Reutemann of Argentina.

Pro Picker Feels Rain Dance May Help

By HAL BOCK

NEW YORK (AP) — It will be perfectly understandable if late tonight, a solitary figure wearing a baseball cap and carrying an ice cream cone arrives at RFK Stadium in Washington, D.C., and does a rain dance on the 50-yard line.

He probably will have a hose with him, too. Coach George Allen, you see, leaves little to chance.

Allen, who finds solace in chocolate, vanilla and strawberry ice cream, has had help from the heavens the last two weeks when rain hit the nation's capital and the Redskins shut out Detroit Lions and whipped St. Louis Cardinals.

Are the Redskins mudders?

Well, Allen did order the tarps removed from the field one h[illegible] kickoff last Monday night. At the time, raindrops were falling on his head and there was a broad smile on his face.

The splashing never bothered Washington against either Detroit or St. Louis. Those two victories helped the Redskins recover from consecutive dry-day losses to Chicago Bears and Kansas City Chiefs.

Now they are 5-2 and tied for second place in the National Football Conference East, one game behind Dallas Cowboys. And guess who's coming to town Sunday?

The Cowboys.

These two teams don't like each other anyway, so they hardly need the incentive of a race to inspire them for Sunday's showdown.

If Allen needs a sideline umbrella, it will be to protect him from the shower of points the Cowboys will score. That's the view of the Pro Picker who went 11-3 last week and is 67-30-1 for .691 this season.

The picks:

Dallas 31, Washington 21

With Roger Staubach hurting, the Cowboys may use Danny White at quarterback. They could use Tom Landry there and still win. Everybody knows that teams playing on Monday have trouble recovering for the following Sunday. Especially old teams.

Cincinnati 23, Cleveland 17

The Browns could gain a share of first place in the AFC Central by knocking off their Ohio rivals. The Bengals like underdogs as well as anybody, but not these underdogs.

Oakland 34, Denver 17

The Raiders are due to break out. Last week's four-point victory over Green Bay was too close for comfort.

Detroit 24, Green Bay 10

The Packers won the first meeting, but that was at home. The Lions the edge this time.

Kansas City 31, Tampa 17

The last time the Chiefs came to Florida, they knocked off Miami. But the Dolphins were a much tougher problem than the Buccaneers should be.

Minnesota 21, Chicago 17

New England 34, Miami 20

If lightweight Tampa Bay could score 20 points against that patchwork Dolphins defence, imagine what Steve Grogan will do to it.

New Orleans 24, Atlanta 6

The Saints shut out the Falcons the first time they met this season. Atlanta seems to have gone downhill since then, losing four in a row.

Buffalo 23, Jets 9

Gary Marangi takes over at quarterback for injured Joe Ferguson. His name sounds like a dance and that's just what he'll do over the listless Jets.

Giant 19, Philadelphia 7

The Giants have a new coach and playing the Eagles doesn't hurt either.

Pittsburgh 30, San Diego 10

The Chargers have some key injuries and the Steelers, who can't afford any more losses, may have Terry Bradshaw back at quarterback.

San Francisco 24, St. Louis 20

The '49ers are for real and who knows how many Cardinals caught pneumonia in last Monday's morass in Washington?

Los Angeles 38, Seattle 17

The Rams have their pick of quarterbacks for a change. James Harris, Ron Jaworski and Pat Haden all are healthy and will get even healthier when they see the Seahawks.

Baltimore 33, Houston 14

Bert Jones become a prime-time television star in the Monday night game.

JUST A RUN FOR FUN

OCEANPORT, N.J. (AP) — There were no losers Friday in the first race at Monmouth Park.

There were no winners, either.

The thoroughbred race was supposed to have been run at a 1 1-16th miles. But starter Russell Downs mistakenly set up the starting gate at a mile and 70 yards, 40 yards short.

After the race the stewards flashed the "inquiry" sign and, after some discussions, decided to invalidate the race and refund all wagers. The daily double also was cancelled.

BAD LUCK FOR VICS

Spectrum and Norfolk House had a carefree afternoon Friday but there was considerable concern for Oak Bay and Mount Douglas before those clubs also earned positions in next week's provincial high school girls' field hockey tournament.

With the two top clubs in each of two sections scheduled to qualify for the B.C. championship event, the Greater Victoria squads battled Friday in playoff competition.

In section "B" matches at Mount Douglas, Spectrum got six goals from Pam Kozak, collected a total of 11 tallies and grabbed first place with three shutout victories.

With Nina Bland counting seven of her team's nine goals, Norfolk House won two of three contests and earned second place in the same division to join the provincial playoff field.

Goals were much more precious commodities in the "A" section playoff at Windsor Park, where Oak Bay, Mount Douglas and Victoria High finished in a first-place deadlock.

Vic High wound up as the unfortunate team after each of the three clubs completed the round-robin struggles with one victory and two ties.

Defending-champion Oak Bay took the top spot on the basis of having scored the most goals after counting four times and yielding one tally. Mount Douglas (2-1) was awarded the second position and the Vics were placed third after scoring only once while holding all three opponents scoreless.

Spectrum, Norfolk House, Oak Bay and Mount Douglas were playing off today at Windsor to decide the Greater Victoria champion and all four will be back in action next Thursday when the three-day provincial tourney starts at Vic High.

In Friday's "A" section struggles, Oak Bay bested Belmont 4-0 and drew 1-1 with Mount Douglas, which nipped Belmont 1-0.

Belmont was also a 1-0 loser to Vic High, which battled to scoreless deadlocks with the Oak Bay and Mount Douglas teams.

Spectrum rolled to 4-0 triumphs over Norfolk House and St. Margaret's in "B" section and added a 3-0 win over Dunsmuir.

Norfolk House, an 8-0 conqueror of Dunsmuir, sqeezed out a 1-0 decision over St. Margaret's, which earned third place with a 2-1 win over Dunsmuir.

Anyone can try being a sailor in the Caribbean

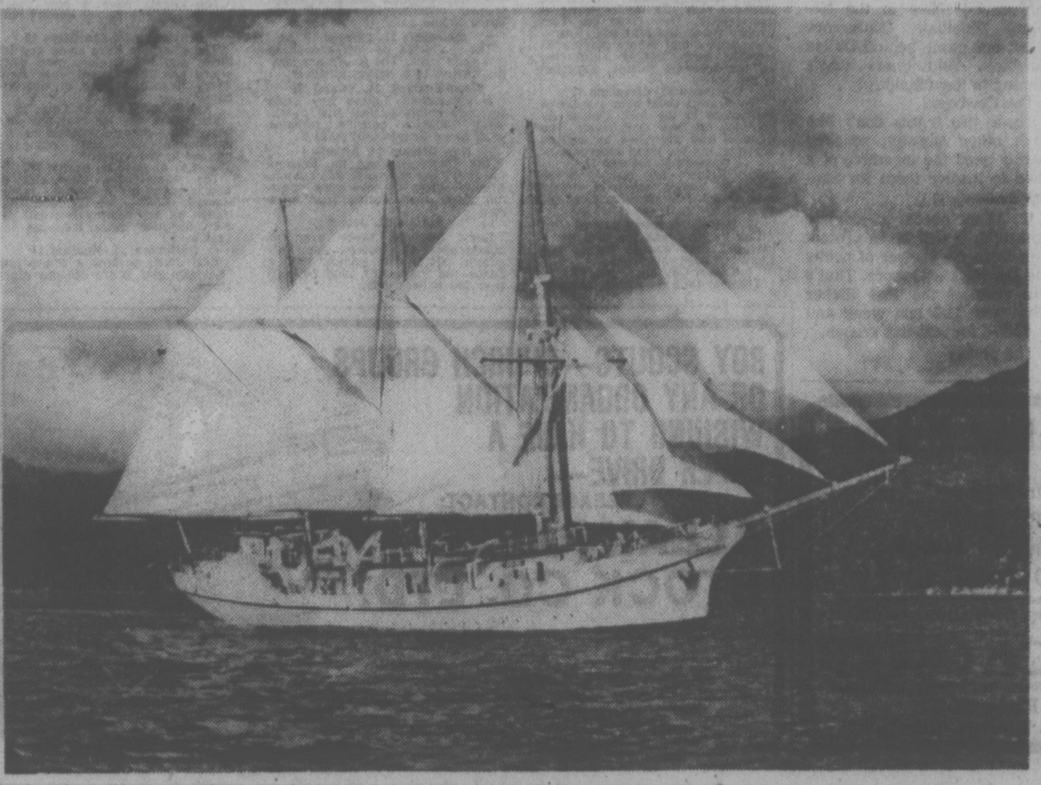
By LESLIE BURDICK

FORT DE FRANCE, Martinique — If you wished you were a sailor on one of the tall ships that stole the bicentennial show last July 4 in New York harbor — don't dismiss that wish.

You can be a sailor here in the Caribbean. There are a number of sailing vessels that want you for a week's cruise, or longer.

Travel by tall ship or schooner is possibly the best way to visit the sun-drenched, warm-sea Caribbean islands. It is also among the cheapest ways, and surely it is the most romantic way.

While landlubbers are locked onto one, or perhaps two islands in a week's vacation, vacationers on sailing ships have as many as 10 ports of call.



Windjamming on the Ariadne in the Caribbean

And besides the regular tourist hot-spots, tall ship moorings include the secluded spots planes and ocean liners miss.

This life-style for a week or two harks back to the days of the buccaneers or, a little more recently, to the times when smugglers used fast, shallow-bottomed schooners to steal in and out of West Indies island reefs in the dead of night.

Today, Caribbean waters are the last stronghold for fine square- or partially square-rigged vessels, once the workhorses of commerce along the northern Atlantic coasts.

This style of vacation — often called a windjammer cruise — can mean work, joyful work. It's a new twist on vacationing that vigorous youth, active elders, and businessmen and women who have difficulty "relaxing," will enjoy.

And for the experienced Caribbean vacationer, the sailing vacation offers a new island perspective.

You must be willing to scale the hull of your vessel on a ladder half made of rope — it's the only means of boarding. Once on deck, you will be raising sails, and maybe taking a turn at the captain's wheel.

While you are expected to want to do these sailoring duties, you may generally be as active or passive in pursuing them as you please.

Dress is casual — bathing suits, shorts, T-shirts, sweatshirts, and jeans. You might want to bring a pantsuit, or jacket and tie, for special occasions on the islands.

This can be a good trip to embark on alone. The group size — ranging from a minimum of 10 to a maximum of 40 — and the sailing tasks are perfect for establishing new friendships. It's a great chance to practise languages — there are French, Spanish, and Dutch-speaking islands, and the sailing ship clientele is international.

On board the Ariadne, a three-masted schooner sailing among the exotic middle Caribbean islands from December through March, a $640 fee for one in a single cabin or a $490 fee per person for two-in-a-cabin last season bought:

- A one-week sail from Martinique south to the Grenadines and points between, returning to Martinique north to Antigua and points between, returning to Martinique.
- Sailing on smaller one-person and two-person boats, water-skiing behind a motorboat, snorkeling and skin diving (a limited supply), air rifles, and bikes for shore. (One had to press repeatedly and insistently to use the boating equipment.)
- Daily, a first and second breakfast, lunch, tea, and dinner prepared by a chef of Cordon Bleu standard and his assistant. One meal was a barbecue after dark on a woodsy, secluded island.

The Ariadne trip is billed as a luxury cruise. The ship's water-level, bunk-bed cabins are wood paneled and brightly colored. Each cabin has its own toilet and shower. The 11-member, largely German crew is a pleasing mix of young businessmen and women who have taken a year off to work at sea, and professional sailors. The food is generally excellent, and sports equipment offered is in good condition.

Other Caribbean tall-ships cruises, offered by firms listed below, may be cheaper and more spartan.

Cruise points of origin will vary. Common starting points are Martinique, Miami, and the Virgin Islands. Air fare to these areas is extra, of course.

A typical day on the Ariadne would start with a German breakfast — cheese, cold cuts, bread, and honey — served in the deck-level dining hall about 8 a.m.

At 8:30 or 9 all willing hands would raise the sails. We would sail from our calm, protected anchorage for three hours to a green, hilly island where we would hike and snorkel or, if there was a village, tour and shop.

After three or four hours, we would sail again, sunning on deck chairs, hanging in the netting near the prow, inspecting shapes and life on intermediate islands — almost always in view — as we sailed.

At sunset, we would eat, then motor ashore for an evening of steel-band music, dancing and meeting islanders. The last motorboat trip back to the ship was at midnight. Sometimes, we would sail at night.

Some of the firms that offer Caribbean tall-ship crusies include:

Stalin's Georgia museum an awkward monument

By PETER OSNOS

GORI, Soviet Georgia — When Joseph Stalin was a toddler, a sturdy fellow with shiny dark eyes, he lived in this quiet country town. Today, a spacious museum in Eastern Baroque style stands here as an awkward monument to the dictator's later years, one of the few public reminders of Stalin in the Soviet Union — and certainly the grandest.

Last year, officials say, over half-a-million tourists from all over the world visited Gori, near Tblisi. Business is so good that Intourist has opened a hotel for foreigners who want to stay longer than a day. The local department store does a brisk trade in Stalin souvenirs, mainly small plastic portraits at three kopecks apiece, about a dollar at the official rate of exchange.

For outsiders, the principal attraction of the museum is the novelty of seeing Stalin so openly honored. Aside from the museum there is a columned pavilion where the two-room wooden hut Stalin lived in as a boy is preserved. And down a broad, neatly landscaped boulevard is a full-length statue of him on a high pedestal.

The impressive setting provides a sense of how Stalin expected himself to be remembered, and offers a unique glimpse of what Soviets now call the "cult of personality." Work on the museum began in 1952, the year before Stalin died and finished in 1957, the year after he was denounced as a tyrant by his successor, Nikita Khrushchev.

Throughout the country other vestiges of Stalin's self-glorification were dismantled; even his enbalmed corpse was removed from alongside Lenin's in the Red Square mausoleum. Not until 1964, a few months before Khrushchev himself was ousted, was the museum shut down.

Then in 1966, the new rulers, putting an end to de-Stalinization, reopened the museum, a gesture of rehabilitation that had the advantage of being far from the national centre. The exhibits chosen for display, however, give a highly selective and sanitized version of Stalin's life, a view that is deliberately restrained.

Instead of confronting the past, the museum simply overlooks it. There is nothing, for instance, about the herding of millions of people into prison camps, the period of forced collectivization and headlong industrialization. The party purges are ignored, and Stalin's role in the Second World war is praised.

Special trip to Hong-Kong rated amazing at $699

That amazing $699 round-trip to Hong Kong — INCLUDING 14 days in the Hong Kong Hilton or the Hyatt Regency — is still running every two weeks from the U.S. west coast. Sometimes oftener.

The cheapest from the U.S. west coast on scheduled carriers is $1,147. That's just for the air fare.

No hidden squeeze. Two friends of mine took this — separately. (The company didn't know them from a bowl of chow fan.' They got axactly the same things I did. (Well, the Hyatt did put me in a suite instead of a room. But the Hyatt people don't put journalists in the broom closets.)

What's wrong with it? It's a long flight and I get jet lag. But no company can do anything about that.

If you have a choice, I'd take the Hyatt Regency. Shopping is better on that Kowloon side. The Hong Kong side is more banks, government and business.

Travel Tips

Though the famous Star Ferry runs between constantly, taking 10 minutes for five cents. Or 10 — it was raised recently. Open air — (Where Suzie Wong told William Holden: "No talk! I rich girl.")

And the ferry boat captains weave through enormous moving freighters like O. J. Simpson going down a field. Great harbor! Great town! And I don't know how you can get Hong Kong at a price like this.

"We are planning next Easter in San Miguel de Allende in Mexico. Are there special events at that time of year?"

I think every town in Mexico has some kind of special event. Special statues of historic legends. Special fireworks. But what it is in San Miguel, there you've got me.

Sterling Noel, newspaperman, just back from San Miguel after three years, says: "Easter Sunday is not one of the big fiesta days of Mexico. Good Friday is the holiday. Parading and soccer games. Things like that."

"Like most Mexican towns they do have special fiesta days. One when Indians come to town and dance for three days as a pennance for having killed a Spanish priest a few hundred years ago. But it's not at Easter."

Noel says you might get something from the tourist office — maybe. Address Turismo, San Miguel de Allende, Gto. Mexico.

"We'll probably be stopping at Martinique on a Norwegian cruise ship . . ."

Best buys are French perfumes since Martinique is a French island. (Josephine, Napoleon's chick, was born here.) Some good French restaurants. Chez Gerarg has great local shrimp cocktail. Veal in cream sauce with mushrooms. Half bottle white wine, half bottle of red. Cognac. Cafe Filtre: $14 for two. (Alas and alors and all that. My file shows this was three years ago. Still the French franc has been going down so you may luck out.)

"Also in St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands?"

Sebastian's was a place I liked. Though when cruise ships are in, you may need a court order to get a table. Banana daiquiri is the specialty. Also pina colada which you find all over the tropics now: pineapple juice, coconut milk, some mysterious rums. A piece of velvet dynamite.

No air-conditioning. Big Humphrey Bogart type fans circling slowly like an old prop plane cutting the engines at the unloading gate.

"A Japanese restaurant in Honolulu please?"

Problem with Japanese restaurants in Honolulu is they are set up for four to ten people. Very hard to get a place that will take only two. But — one good one I found is the Maiko in the Ilikai Hotel — main floor. Also has an excellent suspi bar. Sit at the counter type. Just like Tokyo.

Dickens found characters in these inns

By NORMAN CRIBBENS

GREAT YARMOUTH, England (CP) — Many old-world inns along this rugged sea-battered coast are proud to claim that novelist Charles Dickens once stayed there as guest, diner and tap room celebrant.

Dickens found many of his characters in taverns and there is reason to believe that Samuel Pickwick and other members of the immortal Pickwick Club had their origins in the Great Yarmouth Society of Friends, which functioned in the old Half Moon Inn during the early 1800s.

Certainly it was at the Half Moon Inn that Dickens stayed when, as a young reporter for the London Morning Chronicle. He was sent to this wind-swept corner of eastern England to write first-hand reports of a spirited local election.

And the newspaper accounts of this election bear some resemblances to the one at Eatanswill so hilariously described in The Pickwick Papers as a battle between the Buffs and the Blues.

In Pickwick, Dickens says the contest extended to the church itself, where there was a Buff aisle and a Blue aisle and the congregation was more or less divided into Buff Christians and Blue Christians.

The novelist took care not to place the town of Eatanswill in any particular county of England, and admitted the name was fictitious. He added, that, like other small towns, Eatanswill imagined the eyes of the world were upon it.

While reporting in Yarmouth, it is evident that Dickens had access to the neatly-scripted minutes of the Great Yarmouth Society of Friends, a social club which had no connection with the similarly-named Quaker movement, presided over by a jolly old gentleman named Charles Norfor.

Whether Norfor was Pickwick or not, his minutes bear some resemblance to those attributed by Dickens to the immortal Pickwick Club. They give no reason why the society was formed apart from providing good fellowship in a wine-laden atmosphere.

There is one entry stating that a Mr. Martin "complimented the society with a five-pint bottle of Madeira upon his embracing the connubial rites." There is another recording that "Lord Nelson arrived this day in Yarmouth. Many members of this Society spent the evening in his company and were honoured by it."

Orange is Beautiful Nonstops to Hawaii.

Valencia's big draw is Magic Mountain

By JOHN PHILIP SOUSA

VALENCIA, Calif. — When it comes to thrills, probably no other California community can top this one.

Well over two million fun-loving folks came here last year and were amply rewarded. Few of them, however, came to see this manicured master-planned community 25 minutes north of Los Angeles.

Valencia's big draw is Magic Mountain, a $50 million collection of spine-chilling roller coaster, spin, tramway, boat, Ferris wheel and other rides and attractions that make it one of the most exciting amusement parks anywhere.

"Mountain" is stretching the point a bit; hill would be more accurate. But no one quibbles with "magic," for that is how this dazzling world of fun and entertainment can best be described.

The engineering involved in the operation of many of the rides is most impressive and several of them are one-of-a-kind affairs not found elsewhere; but Magic Mountain's greatest appeal is that everything in it is something you can participate in rather than watch.

At the Swiss Twist a bobsled dashes you along a tilting raceway. A hollowed-out "log" finds you charging through the hills propelled by a 72,000-gallons-a-minute water surge and taking a 47-foot plunge into a lake at the Log Jammer. You soar through the air in the Circus Wheel. You swing 100 feet up in one of the capsules of the Galazy, a one-of-a-kind Ferris wheel.

The floor drops 10 feet beneath you at the Spin Out. And on and on.

Brand-new, but already the park's most-popular attraction is the $3 million Great American Revolution — the ultimate roller coaster.

With 3,657 feet of steep spiraling and twisting track, this is the longest coaster in the West. In addition, Revolution has the world's only vertical loop.

You board one of the coaster's five 20-passenger trains at Revolution Station, do a series of smooth and fast dives and dips, plunge from on high for the 360-degree loop, dart across and around Valencia Falls and into a curved tunnel and ease back to the station through the loop's centre, another "first" anywhere.

No doubt the most exciting two minutes of travel you have ever had.

Another unique and popular experience is El Bumpo: bumper cars on water.

A bit more sedate, but fun just the same, are the Old "99" Steam Train ride, a half-mile trip aboard a train pulled by a real steam locomotive; the grand Centennial Excursion, a mile-long journey aboard open-side railroad cars that creep through a ghost town and glide quietly by pasturelands where real horses, cattle, buffalo and other animals roam; the Funicular, an authentic two-car European cable railway that links the top of the mountain and the park's main plaza; and the Metro, a very modern monorail system that takes you all around Magic Mountain and thus serves as an excellent introduction to the various areas and attractions.

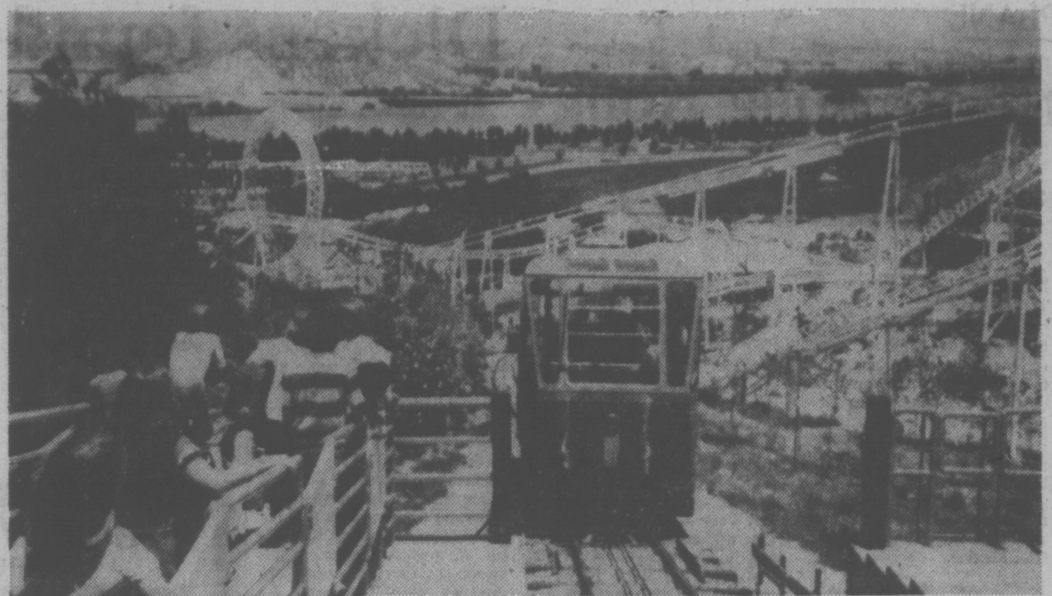
Tiny tots have their own magic area and it's called Children's World, scaled-down "thrill rides" that include a mini-roller coaster, a collection of Red Baron aircraft and play areas. Kids of all ages love the "please touch" Animal Farm, home to more than 200 llamas, chickens, chimps and other friendly critters.

Another hit with youngsters is the Grand Carousel, an exquisitely restored 64-year-old marvel as fascinating as the Revolution loop is thrilling.

Two large and neat arcades offer scores of games to test your skill while a separate shooting gallery lets you take a crack at toy ducks, deer and other traditional targets. There are also several gift, souvenir, clothing and other shops as well as a number of restaurants and snack bars.

Incidentally, food and drink, gifts and games of skill are the only things that will require you to reach for your wallet or purse. Magic Mountain is a one-price park, the admission fee covering all rides, attractions and entertainment.

Magic Mountain is open every day from late May through early September, weekends and preannounced school holidays the balance of the year.



Cable car

Trip in Magic Mountain's European-made cable car, which links top of mountain and park's main plaza, gives sweeping view of $50,000,000 collection of rides and attractions.

Now's the time to plan that Yukon-Alaska trip

By MARGARET NESS

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP) — The name Klondike conjures up visions of fortunes in gold, dance halls and saloons, hardships and fist fights, and for older readers the name of Robert Service and his Songs of a Sourdough.

Sourdough was the nickname given to the gold seekers since they carried with them for making bread on the trail the sour dough that continues to renew itself.

It was 80 years ago, in August, 1896, that gold was discovered in Rabbit Creek (later called Bonanza Creek), a small tributary of the Klondike River, about three miles from the present site of Dawson City. But there were no rapid communications then, and it was a year before the news of the big strike reached the outside world.

Then the rush was on.

Thousands of prospectors flocked to the Yukon and to Alaska, which had been purchased by the United States government from Russia in 1867. To conquer the rugged mountain terrain and the treacherous sections of the Yukon River down to the Klondike, these men had only their own hands, shovels, black powder and horses.

The most practical route, the one most of the gold seekers took, was up the coast by steamer from Seattle and Vancouver to Skagway, Alaska. Then the men had literally to claw their way over one of two mountain passes to Lake Bennett at the head of the Yukon River. It was that route, via White Pass, that came to be known as The Trail of '98.

There on the lake the men had to build boats and rafts and then travel by a series of lakes to the Yukon River with two death-defying rapids, near what now is Whitehorse. Then it was calm water again to the tributary Klondike River and Rabbit Creek.

Right now isn't too early to plan a Yukon-Alaska trip for next spring — or summer or fall — especially if you decide to take the worth-while boat trip up the Inside Passage from Vancouver to Skagway, between the mainland and the series of off-shore islands. Cruises are popular and reservations are made months in advance.

Cruises also permit stopovers to allow passengers to make the return train trip over the spectacular Trail of '98 route to Bennett Lake, or make arrangements for further-afield sightseeing to rejoin a later returning cruise ship.

Skagway, in the shadow of the mountains, is a good starting place to get in the gold-rush mood, even if many of the buildings are abandoned. There's a movement now, backed by federal money, to bring the past back by restoration or rebuilding. However, the 751 citizens have kept at least the dirt road and the plank sidewalks for the 2½ blocks of the main street, rather grandly called Broadway. Some of the weather-beaten buildings are original, many with the traditional false fronts. There's also a Trail of '98 Museum with Indian and gold-rush relics.

In Skagway, at the end of July, 1897, the first boatloads of gold seekers landed and pitched tents. That winter and the next year the harbor site grew to a fair-sized town of some 20,000, with frame buildings, stores and gambling houses. No one knew then that the height of the gold stampede to the Klondike would soon be over, so a narrow-gauge railway was started in May, 1898, to ease the passage through the mountains and down the river and the rapids. It was completed in 1900 and the town of Whitehorse sprang up at its terminus. Today the White Pass and Yukon Railway carries tourists in its comfortable, parlor car-type coaches, and automobiles and heavy freight on flatcars. It's a six-hour ride to Whitehorse.

The train trip is spectacular, a steady climb up the mountain pass to the summit, at 2,885 feet. This is also the international boundary between Alaska and Canada. Before the train reaches the 250-foot tunnel through perpendicular rock, passengers can see the path worn into solid rock by the thousands of frantic gold seekers. There's also a stretch called Dead Horse Gulch where some 3,000 pack horses died of overwork and starvation.

Snug inns of California's pastoral hills, coastline beckon

ON THE GO with Jerry Hulse

For those of you who can't afford to do the country inns of Britain and France this year, don't despair.

Why not the Cotswolds of California instead?

Lost in the valleys and the folds of Northern California's pastoral hills and coastline are many snug inns that would warm the heart of any traveller.

First off, I'm thinking of the charming Wine Country Inn at St. Helena in the Napa Valley. Although barely a year old, it exudes an atmosphere seemingly as old as Napa's wineries themselves.

Surrounded by vineyards and verdant hillsides, the Wine Country Inn is as pleasing as a canvas laid down by Van Gogh.

Each of its 14 rooms is distinctly different, individually furnished with a variety of tasteful country antiques.

Beds were bought from farms throughout Nebraska, and rustic siding was used from tumbledown barns to give a feeling of age to this new inn with the old face.

Ned Smith, former Bay Area advertising executive, dismantled three sagging Napa Valley buildings to obtain the doors and beams for the inn; it stands half-hidden behind a grove of trees near Freeman Abbey, just off California 29.

Old-fashioned bed quilts handmade by Ned's wife Marge and members of the Seventh Day Adventist Church, cheer the guest.

Of the 14 rooms, nine come equipped with Swedish and Franklin wood-burning stoves. And although huge wine casks made do as headboard in one particular room, the Smiths used remarkable restraint in keeping their inn from being folksy or cutesy.

What they turned out is an old-world guest home that's as snug as one of Marge Smith's patchwork quilts.

Labelled a "country inn," it is exactly that.

Rates: $31-$33 single; $33-$35 double. Breakfast is on the house — juice, fruit, coffee, homemade muffins and banana bread.

For reservations write to The Wine Country Inn, 1152 Lodi Lane, St. Helena 94574.

Napa Valley, less than two hours out of San Francisco, is the home also of the dollhouse-like Magnola Hotel at Yountville.

Once a brothel and later a hideout for bootleggers, the Magnola is operated by Napa Valley natives Ray and Nance Monte.

Theirs is a six-room inn.

Plump sofas fill its parlor and guest rooms are furnished with Tiffany lamps, four-poster beds and old-country farm chests.

If there is a complaint it is only because the rooms are rather small. Otherwise, it is charming.

Rates: $30 a night single, $40 double, including breakfast (French toast, bacon and eggs, coffee and fruit).

For reservations, write to the Magnolia Hotel, Drawer M, Yountville 94599.

In the same small village the old Burgundy Inn welcomes guests in five little rooms furnished with antiques.

Only, unlike the Magnolia, everything is for sale — including the guest's bed.

Rates: $25 single, $38-$42 double. This includes breakfast — juice, pastries and coffee, fresh fruit for the room and (whee-eee!) all the wine one can consume.

Fields of Cabernet, Riesling and Chardonnay flow to the close-by hillsides.

Burgundy House, with its 22-inch thick walls, dates from the 1870s.

For reservations write to Mary Keenan, 6711 Washington St. Yountville 94599.

Note: The crush season in Napa Valley peaks out this month. More than 40 wineries process grapes during the period.

Some other suggestions for vacationers motoring to Northern California:

HERITAGE HOUSE — Overlooking a storm-tossed sea, this popular inn north of San Francisco at Little River appeals to honeymooners and old romantics alike and is a favorite of other travel writers too. Meals are taken in the main building, a 100-year-old farmhouse with shelves of books and a crackling fire.

Guests occupy charming cottages that the proprietor has named Scott's Opera House, the Barber Pole, the Country Store, the Bonnet Shop, the Ice Cream Parlor, etc.

Escapists will be pleased to know that neither TV nor telephone will disturb the peacefulness of their rooms. Both are conspicuous by their absence.

Rates from $27 single and $42 double (Modified American Plan).

Write to Heritage House, Little River 95456.

LITTLE RIVER INN — Only a few miles away, old-fashioned goodness prevails at Little River Inn. The main building, a huge white frame structure, faces a boiling sea.

Breads, soups and desserts are homemade at this charming hideaway set among redwoods and eucalyptus. Close by, fields are white with lambs and green with clover.

Rates start at $16 single, $20 double.

For reservations write to Little River Inn, Little River 95456.

TIMBER COVE INN — The sea as well as classical melodies soothe the guests at this unusual inn on California 1 (about three hours north of San Francisco). Occupying a wind-whipped bluff near Ft. Ross, it is the perfect choice for romantics of any age.

Rates — single or double — are $30-$55 a day. The more expensive rooms come with fireplaces.

Drop a card to Timber Cove Inn, Jenner 95450.

SEA RANCH — Another spectacular setting along California 1, only a few miles beyond Timber Cove. Guests occupy a handsome windblown building of natural wood. There's a delicious taste of aloneness, a snug inn caught up between ocean and tree-covered hillsides.

Sea Ranch is wild and peaceful, whether the day be sunny or swirling with fog. This is a 5,000-acre spread with tennis courts, a swimming pool and sauna as well as miles of coastline.

The address: Sea Ranch Lodge, Box 44, Sea Ranch 95497.

Finally, just across the Golden Gate from San Francisco there's Casa Madrona, a French-style country inn clinging to a hillside in Sausalito.

Sheltered by trees and perfumed by banks of flowers, this snug, three-story dwelling contains only 10 rooms.

Rates (single or double) are $20-$35 a day with bath, $18-$25 without.

Casa Madrona faces Angel and Alcatraz islands, with San Francisco gripping the horizon.

In the style of many European hotels, a continental breakfast is served in the room. In the evening the proprietor, Robert Henri Deschamps, prepares dinner in an excellent French restaurant (La Vivoir) on the ground floor. Roses candlelight, wine, harbor lights . . .

Try scenic route on this vacation

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — When Rob Simms takes a group of people on vacation they go the scenic route, but it's sometimes tough for them to stop to admire the scenery.

A vacation with Simms often means roaring right through the scenery on a river raft.

This year Simms, owner of Cascade River Holidays of Yale, took 22 people on a raft through Hell's Gate when the Fraser River was at its highest point.

Simms says he is sometimes apprehensive about running rapids. Water levels affect rafting dramatically and the level is different on each trip.

He has several rubber rafts varying in lengths from 17 to 33 feet, the largest capable of travelling about 40 miles a day.

He recently took seven guests on a 600-mile voyage down the Fraser River, from Prince George to Vancouver. During the 14-day trip they passed through 25 series of rapids, including the treacherous Hell's Gate.

Each guest paid $1,200 to drift down the Fraser.

Cruise the South Seas on ships as friendly and warm as Polynesia.

No other vacation can match the splendor of a South Seas cruise with the friendly Americans, the SS Mariposa or SS Monterey. And no other cruise can rival the incomparable service and friendly spirit found only aboard these two proud ships of the U.S. Registry.

The ships. The SS Mariposa and SS Monterey were specifically designed for Pacific cruising. They're large enough to have everything luxury liners should have yet small enough (with just 330 passengers) to offer a cordial, intimate atmosphere.

Isn't that the way you'd like to see the South Seas?

The service. With a crew member for almost every passenger, we have time to pamper you in our famous grand manner. First initiated by sister ships over 90 years ago, it's a way of life that has become the hallmark of luxury cruising in the Pacific.

The spirit. It's our famous Aloha Spirit—as friendly and warm as the people you'll meet Down Under. It's this spirit of hometown hospitality that really sets our cruises apart.

In 43 days round-trip from San Francisco or Los Angeles you'll cruise 15,000 miles of peaceful Pacific. And experience all the enchantment of the fabled South Seas. Or you can board in Honolulu for a 31-day round-trip, with sailings Jan. 8 and Feb. 14.

South Seas Cruises Jan. 2, Feb. 8, Mar. 13*

49-day cruise March 13. We also have a special longer cruise with an alternate 14-port itinerary that includes Tasmania and both the South and North Islands of New Zealand. It's 49 days round-trip from California, or 38 days from Honolulu departing Mar. 19. Whichever you choose, now is the time to make that South Seas dream come true. See your travel agent or send us the coupon for full information.

Sailing dates shown are from San Francisco. Ships depart from Los Angeles the following day.

Prairie Drought Raises Dirty Thirties' Fears

WINNIPEG (CP) — The exceptionally dry weather that ushered in the fall season on the prairies this year has revived the spectre of the Dirty Thirties for many Manitobans.

"It's the driest weather we've had since 1936 — and people say 1936 was a terrible year," says Ken Waddell, provincial agricultural representative in Gladstone.

Art Domes, his counterpart in Portage La Prarie, echoes similar forebodings: "From Portage to Carberry, there is almost panic among farmers about the level of water in their wells."

But farmers are not the only ones concerned.

Manitoba Hydro estimates that the low level of major lakes and rivers will mean a net loss of $18 million in revenue. Building inspectors for the city of Winnipeg have been barraged by calls from householders whose basement walls and floors are cracking and heaving. A record number of fires have ravaged the province's forests.

Are residents of the prairies in for a rerun of the dust-bowl years of the late 1930s? Hugh Fraser, supervisor of scientific services for Environment Canada, says it depends largely on what happens next year.

What made the Dirty Thirties so terrible was not one dry year, but two dry years in a row, he explains.

In contrast to some states in the upper Midwest, Canadian prairie farmers had a bumper grain crop this year despite below-normal precipitation — thanks to a few timely rainfalls in June and ideal harvest weather.

Now the land is dry, and Fraser says crops could be in trouble next spring if the dryness continues.

"We can breathe a good deal easier next year if we get some good soaking rains in the spring," he says.

For others, the damage has already been done.

Manitoba Hydro has fallen back on coal-burning generating stations at Selkirk and Brandon because of low flows on the Winnipeg and Nelson River systems and expects to be a net importer of electricity this year.

Premier Ed Schreyer said last week that instead of selling $15 million worth of surplus power, the Crown agency will probably have to pay $3 million to sister utilities to meet the province's needs.

Soil around homes in the Winnipeg area has been shrinking, and some householders have been watering the grounds in hopes of avoiding major structural damage. Some have been forced to seek help from building contractors.

PM's SILENCE RILES DIEF

OTTAWA (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker pressed the government today to consider segregating sexual offenders from the "general run" of prisoners in federal penitentiaries.

He was left sputtering with indignation in the Commons when Prime Minister Trudeau refused to respond to his suggestions.

"Cheap contempt for Parliament," Diefenbaker bellowed, shaking his finger at the smiling prime minister.

The incident took place as Diefenbaker rose to ask the government to consider putting sexual offenders beyond the reach of other criminals.

His concern arose from a hostage-taking incident on Thursday at Dorchester Penitentiary in New Brunswick, where four prisoners held a prison guard and a convicted child-killer, David William Threinen, to back demands that the four be transferred to another prison.

Convicts such as Threinen are "anathema to the general run of prisoners," Diefenbaker said.

He asked the prime minister to see if such prisoners could be placed in separate institutions to remove them from the danger of "lynch law and kangaroo court" by other prisoners.

Richardson Tour Starts in City

OTTAWA (FP) — James Richardson, former minister of national defence and Liberal Member of Parliament for Winnipeg South will embark on a cross-Canada speaking tour commencing next Friday, Nov. 5, in Victoria.

He will speak from Victoria to St. John's, Newfoundland during the coming weeks.

Since he resigned Oct. 13 from the cabinet over the issue of imbedding language rights in the Canadian constitution under a Quebec veto Richardson has been interviewed on television and radio.

He has been also interviewed by newspapers making his position clear that he quit the cabinet to inform the public of the far-reaching implications contained in some of the proposals to be considered at the upcoming federal-provincial constitutional conference.

Responding to requests that he appear at various centres to make public speeches Richardson has decided to make a cross-country tour. His first address will be at the luncheon meeting of the Men's Canadian Club in Victoria.

No U.S. Printers

OTTAWA (CP) — Management of Ottawa Journal denied Friday reports that the newspaper has hired printers from the United States to operate some of its plant machinery.

The Journal, saying members of the International Typographical Union are striking the newspaper, is using non-union help to publish. The union says it is locked out.

Stanley Knowles (NDP — Winnipeg North Centre) said in the Commons Friday he had heard that The Journal imported workers from the U.S.

He asked Manpower Minister Bud Cullen to see if this was so and if the workers were granted necessary work permits.

John Grace, vice-president of The Journal, said later that the newspaper is being put out by local non-union help already employed. It had not hired in the U.S.

Broadbent Urges Tax Cuts

BURNABY (CP) — Federal New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent Friday called for an immediate personal income tax cut for all workers earning less than $25,000 a year in an effort to reduce Canada's seven-percent unemployment rate.

In a speech to the founding meeting of the North Vancouver-Burnaby NDP constituency association, Broadbent said a $1.5-billion tax cut would be a first step in an emergency program to reduce unemployment.

"Currently we are heading for a winter with more than eight per cent unemployment — the highest level since the great depression," Broadbent said.

The tax cut would create jobs because the money would be spent immediately.

Broadbent's proposal calls for a maximum credit of $400 for those with taxable incomes of $5,000 or less; $300 at the $10,000 level; $200 at $15,000 and $100 at $20,000.

Broadbent also attacked corporate tax deferments.

"Back in 1973, deferred corporate taxes were officially estimated at $5 billion," he said.

"Today, estimates of unpaid taxes range to $9 billion, with growth at over $1 billion a year in taxes which will never be paid into the treasury of Canada."

Broadbent also said Friday the government intends to withdrew the anti-inflation surtax on high-income earners on Dec. 31.

"This one meagre attempt to provide equity in the anti-inflation program will be ended after one year," Broadbent said.

"It will cost the government $115 million in lost revenue. It will mean an extra $1,000 in 1977 for the poor person struggling to get by with taxable income of $60,000."

The 10-per-cent surtax applies to those earning more than $30,000.

Doubled Exports To Russia Seen

MOSCOW (CP) — External Affairs minister Don Jamieson said Friday he expects Canadian exports to the Soviet Union will more than double next year.

Jamieson, speaking to reporters after meetings with Soviet officials, said Soviet exports to Canada may expand substantially, especial ly in oil products.

Trade between the two countries, excluding grain, now accounts for one-tenth of one per cent of Canadian trade.

Canadian exports to the Soviet Union last year totalled $409 million but 85 per cent covered grain sales. Imports from the Soviet Union were valued at $28.5 million

Canadian businessmen obtained between $70 and $80 million in new trade. Canadian officials said sales included oil and gas valves, boilers, compressors and transport machinery.

Another development, which a government official described as promising, indescribed as promisin, involves Societ plans for a billion-dollar pulp-and-paper complex which may involve Canadian and Finnish co-operation. If the Soviets go ahead, Canadians may get another $250 million in new business.

CBC CANCELS QUE. DEBATE

MONTREAL (CP) — The CBC's French-language network cancelled plans Friday to broadcast an election debate between leaders of five Quebec parties amid accusations that Radio-Canada was biased against the Liberal Party.

The cancellation came amid squabbling between the Liberals, the Creditistes and Radio-Canada over equal time on the air, with both parties saying they were being deprived of adequate media exposure.

Quebec Marks Time On Mass Flu Shots

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec government has decided not to begin a mass swine flu inoculation program despite a plea from federal Health Minister Marc Lalonde.

But Claude Forget, provincial minister of social affairs, said Friday a program to inoculate selected groups of the population in Montreal will be carried out starting Nov. 1 as originally planned.

Swine flu shots will be given to peple aged 65 or more, the chronically ill, pregnant women and persons employed in essential services.

"For the rest of the population we will wait until we are told of confirmed cases of the flu in other parts of the world," Forget said.

In Regina, Dr. George Davidson, Saskatchewan's epidemiologist, said Friday residents of the province may never be inoculated with swine flue vaccine.

Kidney Cure Linked To Fish

GLASGOW, Scotland (Reuter) — Dr. James Dobbie, consultant physician in the Glasgow Royal Infirmary's kidney disease unit, was examining the kidney of a young salmon with an electron microscope when he thought he spotted a disease of the filtering units similar to nephritis (inflammation of the kidney) in man.

But further research showed that the condition was normal for a salmon preparing to move from fresh water, where the kidneys work hard, to salt water, where the fish's kidneys switch to low.

Nephritis causes a sort of kidney "switch-off" in humans. Dr. Dobbie and his team then tried to isolate the substance in the fish that caused its kidneys to switch back on when entering fresh water.

They found this was done by the hormone prolactin, which in humans is secreted in the bloodstream of nursing mothers, and subsequently they were successful in treating a woman with nephritis by stimulating her secretion of prolactin.

However, Dr. Dobbie said that as prolactin is only available in small quantities in the human body, much research must be done before the treatment can be used widely.

Good News Bible offers Word in 1977 accent

The Bible in Today's English Version — the complete Old and New Testaments in one book — will be ready for publication in Canada on Monday.

The Good News Bible, published in this country by the Canadian Bible Society, is an attempt to translate the scriptures into natural, everyday language from the original Hebrew, Greek and Aramaic texts.

It was 10 years ago that the New Testament was published under the title Good News For Modern Man. The complete Bible, titled Good News Bible, has now been completed.

More than 50 million copies of the 1966 version of the New Testament have been distributed.

Distribution secretary of the Canadian Bible Society, Rev. Howard Zurbrigg, has reported that the intial order for the Good News Bible for Canada is 300,000. He expects 150,000 copies will be sold before Christmas.

The aim of the new Bible is to give maximum understanding of the content of the original texts. Clear communication is the goal.

Therefore, the translation does not follow the traditional vocabulary and style found in the historic English Bible versions.

The new Bible was translated and published by the United Bible Societies for use throughout the world.

A group of translators appointed by the American Bible Society undertook the work of translation in cooperation with a British consultant recommended by the British and Foreign Bible Society.

Obvious changes are deletion of the archaic ye, thee and thou and modernization of verb forms.

A verse in an older version reads: "Then said they unto him, Who art thou? that we may give an answer to them that sent us. What sayest thou of thyself? (John 1:22).

In the Goods News Bible the same verse reads: "Then tell us who you are," they said. "We have to take an answer back to those who sent us. What do you say about yourself?"

A verse from the Book of Proverbs shows the clearer language of the new translation.

Proverbs 18:1, 2 in the King James version reads: "Through desire a man, having separated himself, seeketh and intermeddleth with all wisdom. A fool hath no delight in understanding, but that his heart may discover itself."

The Good News Bible translation reads: "People who do not get along with others are interested only in themselves: they will disagree with what everyone else knows is right. A fool does not care whether he understands a thing or not; all he wants to do is show how smart he is."

There is no likelihood of the new translation, for many people, will replace the King James version, says Dr. Kenneth McMillan, general secretary of the Canadian Bible Scoiety.

"Some of us were reared on that version," he said, "and we understand and like it. We must honestly face the fact, however, that to many people it sounds like another dialect."

"If our real desire is to communicate God's truth, we'll welcome this attempt to convey that truth in understandable, everyday language. It's not a case of one Bible replacing another. Each person will read the version he best understands. For many that will be the Good News Bible.

The new translation's 1,470-page volume will sell for $2.95 in paperback and $3.95 in hard cover.

Victoria, Vancouver festivals

Choirs will link up

Two festival services — one in Victoria and one in Vancouver — have been arranged by the newly-formed British Columbia branch of the Royal School of Church Music to take place in November.

The music for the services will be sung by members of RSCM affiliated choirs from Vancouver Island and the lower Mainland.

The Victoria festival will be held in Christ Church Cathedral at 3 p.m. next Saturday, the Mainland festival in Vancouver's Christ Church Cathedral at 3 p.m. Nov. 20.

Theme of the two festivals will be Time and Eternity and the services will trace the church's liturgical year with readings, hymns and anthems ranging from J.S. Bach to contemporary English composers Herbert Howells and Kenneth Leighton.

Organist and choirmaster Beal Thomas of Christ Church Cathedral, who is special commissioner of the RSCM. will conduct the music for the Victoria service. Cathedral sub-organist Paul Halley will play. Retired Archbishop Godfrey Gower of New Westminster will preach.

In Vancouver, Dr. Gerald Knight, overseas commissioner of the RSCM, will conduct the music and the organ will be played by Patrick Wedd, cathedral organist and chorimaster. Archbishop David Somerville of New Westminster, Metropolitan of the ecclesiastical province of B.C., will preach.

The public is invited to both services.

Pastor-author plans four-day talk series

A pastor, who is also an educator and author, from the Nazarene Theological Seminary in Kansas City, Mo., will give a series of talks for four days next week in First Church of the Nazarene, 2571 Quadra.

Dr. Oscar Reed, professor of philosophy and Christian ethics at NTS will speak at 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. Sunday and at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

"It will be four days of spiritual renewal," said Rev. Roland Feltmate, pastor of the church, this week.

"Through his messages he will seek to teach and to evangelize by means of a careful exposition of certain New Testament letters. His approach to the Bible will be a challenge to the unchurched person as well as a time of enrichment for the believer."

Feltmate said that Reed had been the "beloved pastor of one of the largest churches in the denomination," First Church in Calgary for 15 years.

"His published expositions on I and II Corinthians have been received with great appreciation," he added.

Week-long mission for Oldfield chapel

A former pastor of Glad Tidings Pentecostal Church — Rev. E. W. Robinson — will hold a week-long mission at Oldfield Road Gospel Chapel beginning Sunday.

Robinson's talks on God's Plan of the Ages will be heard at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. Sunday and at 7:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

During his pastorate in Victoria, he was instrumental in seeing several branch churches established.

More students eye ministry

Canada's theological colleges report a sharp increase in the numbers of students preparing for the ordained ministry, according to the current issue of The United Church Observer.

The Observer says the reasons for the increase are not know, but that "a study of the experience, motive, commitment and objectives of the candidates will be very valuable information."

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

The writings of the late Ian Fleming are not notable for their religious insights, but I was delighted to find in For Your Eyes Only, one of Fleming's 007 fairy-tales-for-adults, a significant statement on prayer. "M," the head of the spy-and-security organization which employs James Bond, makes this observation:

"Some people are religious — pass the decision on to God. I used to try that sometimes in the Service, but He always passed the buck back again — and told me to go on an make up my own mind. Good for one, I suppose, but tough."

We do have some peculiar notions of prayer. Sometimes when we pray — if we pray, that is — we seem to have the emotional posture of a dog begging for a bone. Sometimes we seem to be asking God that two and two will not make four because four is quite inconvenient for us. We think at times that by prayer we can somehow manipulate God so that he will sort our our problems for us. Desperation can drive us to try to pass the buck to God — but, as "M" points out, God passes the buck back to us.

Prayer, as prayer is understood in biblical faith, is not a way of trying to badger God into doing your will in a particular situation, into serving your purposes, into giving you some special advantage. Prayer, rather, is a way of learning God's will for you and of being guided to peace and serenity and fulfilment.

Soren Kierkegaard, the great 19th - century Danish Christian philosopher, put the matter very simply: "Prayer does not change God, but it changes the one who offers it."

If you look carefully into your heart when you are trying to pray you may find that what you are really asking for is a little help from God for some plan of your own. Or you may find that you really do not want what you are praying for. One of the old-time evangelists used to put it in this way: "Many a fellow is praying for rain with his tub the wrong way up."

Prayer does not bring us clear solutions for the problems we present to God, although often it will give us flashes of insight which put our problems in their true perspectives. Prayer does not relieve us of our responsibilities, but it can help us face our responsibilities with new honesty and new understanding and new determination.

A balanced, biblically-based definition of prayer is given in the old catechism of the United Church of Canada:

"Prayer is laying our lives open before God in gratitude and expectancy, casting ourselves on His mercy and love, telling Him all the desires of our hearts, listening to His voice, and accepting His way for our lives."

Christian school new group's aim

A society to establish Christian secondary education is being formed by a group of Greater Victoria churchgoers.

A general membership meeting has been called for 8 p.m. Thursday in Emmanuel Baptist Church. All those interested are invited.

Aim of the group, which is made up of various denominations, is to provide Christian education starting with Grades 8 and 9 in the fall of 1977.

The group now is seeking parents who wish to give their children a secondary education "directed by God's all powerful Word and have these children trained to help them acquire and grow in a Christian view of life and the world."

The educational program and methods of instruction would be dependent on a Biblical philosophy to provide the viewpoint, general background, truth and principles for interpreting the facts encountered in the study of any subject.

A steering committee has met regularly during the summer and has drafted a constitution and bylaws for the society. Thursday night's meeting has been called to elect a board of directors to assume the task of implementing the goals of the society.

Anyone over the age of 18 who subscribes to the constitution is eligible for membership. Membersdhip is open to young and old, parent and non-parent, couples and single persons.

"It is our prayer that the society will receive active support from the entire Christian community in Victoria," a spokesman said.

Church marking 50th year

The annual fall fair of St. Martin-in-the-Fields Anglican Church, 550 Obed, will start at 10:30 a.m. next Saturday in the church hall.

The church is celebrating its 50th anniversary this month even though its roots reach as far back as 1911.

That was the year Sunday school classes began in the home of Mrs. S. Wilkinson on Obed Avenue. When a small congregation grew up around the Sunday school, it became known as the mission of St. Jude's.

By 1914, a church for the Gorge district had been built and named St. Jude's.

In 1926, the present property was bought and a new church was built with money donated by Rev. Lloyd Keating who specified that the name be changed to St. Martin-in-the-Fields, the name of the church he had been associated with in London.

The church was renovated and enlarged in 1963 and a new parish hall was built.

The present incumbent is Rev. Trefor Williams who has served the church for the past seven years.

Ordained in Bangor, Wales, he began his ministry in the diocese of Chester, England. He later served the Columbia Coast Mission before coming to St. Martin's.

Food bank established

CALGARY (CP) — A federally-assisted food bank for world emergency relief has been set up by the Mennonite Central Committee, a church-sponsored relief and service agency.

The committee says the new plan will allow Canadian farmers to donate wheat, creating a reserve for emergency and development needs around the world.

Halloween sharing can help children

RELIGION

Editor: Don Gain

Two Halloween drives will be carried out this weekend — one by the Seventh Day Adventist Church and one by the Save the Children Fund.

Children of the Adventist Church's Pathfinders, dressed in their uniforms, will be knocking on doors Halloween, which has been designated as Sunday evening, asking for canned goods and other donations for the church's Christmas hampers for those in need.

The Victoria branch of the Save the Children Fund will be carrying on its 25th anniversary Halloween drive at the same time.

The idea originated with Mrs. W. W. McGill who organized the first such drive in 1952. At that time she asked neighborhood children to collect for the fund while they were asking for tricks or treats for themselves.

During that quarter century children in B.C. have raised more than $330,000 for the fund.

The funds are spent in many ways — on starving children, on emergency relief for earthquake victims, on handicapped and homeless children.

The Adventists' Halloween drive is a prelude to its annual world appeal for funds to supply relief in many countries.

From bedding and shoes to canned foods, the church has distributed supplies to many needy persons both locally and overseas.

On the worldwide scale last year, Adventists gave aid to 11,765,102 persons, distributed 17,400,889 articles of clothing and gave close to $9.4 million in cash and food.

The 73rd annual world appeal in Victoria will continue through Nov. 27. Members of the church will participate during this time, calling on Greater Victoria residents.

Funds received will be used for community service relief, disaster aid, educational, medical and mission work.

The local community services centre of the church is located at 645 Dunedin and is directed by Mrs. Eleanor Wyness.

Another service of the church is the Health Education Centre at 3019 Shakespeare. Here health and related programs are conducted by professionals in various fields and the public is invited to take advantage of the programs.

The five-day plan to stop smoking and the weight control programs are held regularly and are well-attended.

Since last February, when the local community services centres moved to its location on Dunedin, 700 people have received help, 143 pieces of bedding, 30 food hampers and many items of furniture and clothing have been provided to needy families in the city.

Hobbyists to display products

Members of Oak Bay United Church at work on their avocations will be featured at the hobby, art and crafts show from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Friday and from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday, in the church at Mitchell and Granite.

Among the 50 exhibitors will be people demonstrating stone-tumbling, spinning, weaving and fly-tying.

Also featured will be collections of stamps, postmarks, old irons and Eskimo carvings. Other members will show quilts, miniature flowers, petit-point pictures, oil paintings, beadwork and other products of their hobbies.

Some exhibitors will have items for sale.

The event is the second annual show sponsored by the AOTS men's club of the church.

Doom's Day prediction

TORONTO (CP) — Phillip Berrigan, an anti-war advocate from the United States, says that in 15 to 20 years, the world will be obliterated by a nuclear holocaust.

Berrigan, who with his brother, Rev. Daniel Berrigan, became the centre of opposition to the Vietnam war, told an audience at Bloor Street United Church that Canada is in the line of nuclear fire.

A lesson for North

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Bishop Douglas Hambridge of the Anglican diocese of Caledonia says a program for developing an effective lay ministry among Latin American Spanish-speaking Indians has been translated into English and adopted successfully in his diocese.

Hambridge said eight parishes in the northern British Columbia diocese have completed the first part of the program.

Theme for the day is Declare His Glory ... His Wonders. Speakers from the Victoria churches of Douglas Street, Elk Lake, Emmanuel and First Baptist will be heard.

World Vision

A get-together of sponsors of World Vision will be held at 8 p.m. Friday in Carnarvon Park pavilion in Oak Bay.

First Fridays days of fasting

Rev. Ted Follows, pastor of Elk Lake Community Baptist Church, has announced the inauguration of a day of fasting and prayer on the first Friday of each month.

The first meeting was held this month and the second will take place next Friday.

Follows said that First United Church has made its chapel available from noon to 2 p.m. to enable Christians of all denominations to come together for prayer.

He said these Christians are taking literally the promsie given by God in II Chronicles 7:14: "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked ways; then I will hear frrom heaven and will forgive their sins and heal their land."

He said Christians are being asked to go without at least one meal during that day and to spend that time praying for Canada.

To provide guidance for individual prayer a printed intercession has been produced and is available from James Bay United Church, 384-5821.

"In these days, when society the world over seems to be going berserk God calls believers to cease grumbling, forsake fears and pray earnestly for the salvation of our nation from pagan chaos. Do you care enough to go without a meal and spend an hour in prayer?" Follows asked.

He May Be Last Umbrella Fixer

MONTREAL (CP) — In an age when many workers are dickering for shorter hours, old Joe Lacasse puts in a 100 hours a week fixing umbrellas. And he'd like to do more.

He's been an umbrella repairman all his life. Although it's a line of vanishing trades, there's no shortage of work. When work piles up, he'll sometimes go two nights without sleep to catch up, he said in an interview in his workshop.

"When I was younger I used to go three nights without sleep but I can't do that any more," he said. "I've got nothing against long hours."

He declined to give his age when asked. He said only that he's ageless.

Mr. Lacasse's father was an umbrella repairman, as well as a cobbler and a harness maker, in the Beauce region south of Quebec City.

There were 10 boys and 10 girls in the family and the boys all learned their father's trade, he said. But with the exception of himself and his late brother, Romeo, who came to Montreal with him in the late 1930s, the others found other trades.

The work itself is often difficult. He often has to construct new pieces, particularly stems. Often these are no longer manufactured because the umbrellas are too old or are not available because they are imported.

How does he manage his daily grind?

"You have to like it," he said. "I'm going to work as long as I can, until my last breath, as my brother Romeo did."

He said he's never taken holidays and isn't interested in doing so now. "My holidays are when I go home after work."

Fastest-Growing Spectator Sport? It's Dancing

NEW YORK (AP) — Long overshadowed by other performing arts, dance is now on the crest of a box-office boom in the United States.

"The fastest-growing spectator sport in the country" is how one leading manager describes the surging popularity.

Even anyone unsure of the difference between a jet and a piroutte must be impressed by the statistical leaps recorded during the craft's remarkable decade of growth.

The audience for professional companies in the U.S. has soared since the mid-'60s from one million to 15 million, and has spread across the country in the process.

Formerly 68 per cent of all American attendance was concentraded in New York City. Now 80 per cent of the spectators are outside the metropolis. Troupes have visited every state.

There's also been a rapid increase in the number of performers, and a growing swarm of eager apprentices.

The Association of American Dance Companies today lists 350 members—though not all of professional calibre—compared with 132 in 1966.

Dance, according to craft accountants, now is a $200-million factor in the national economy. That's the amount estimated as necessary to keep operations at their current level.

A record was registered by the American Ballet Theatre when in nine weeks in the summer it rgossed $1,857,990, at the box-office.

Growth hasn't solved old problems, however, and some new ones may be incubating.

"It's still not glory time," says Charles Reinhart, a leading manager-consultant, as he notes dancer pay scales still trail those for musicians, singers and actors.

Nor has upswinging enthusiasm narrowed the gap between income and outflow, which plagues all cultural enterprises.

Chronic financial woe, in fact, recently caused one of the top modern dance ensembles, the Paul Taylor Company, to announce it was disbanding indefinitely.

On the other hand, the Cleveland Ballet Guild, after years of cautious growth, emerges this season into a fully professional subscription series. In Seattle, the Pacific Northwest Ballet, soaring from a zero to $800,000 budget in two years, has hired former ballerina Melissa Hayden to head its training program.

All sorts of explanations — from modern-day liberation to emergence of superstars such as Nureyev and Baryshnikov, to growing TV and movie attention—are offered for the phenomenal growth.

"The '60s were a fascinating period in the breakdown of old puritanical restraints," in Reinhart's opinion. "Movement and display of the body was no longer a sin.

"Dance also makes great demands on individual imagination—there's no right or wrong, impressions are your own. When many isms receded in the '70s, dance survived."

Jane Arey of the Rockefeller Foundation sees explanation, too, in a sudden flowering of talent for kinesthetic expression.

"The real miracle," she says, "is that creativity has suddenly exploded."

Notation methods, only recently developed, have made possible the preservation and wider use of inventive choreography.

The new dance display is widely, wildly eclectic, ranging from workshop experiments to 40-week tours by major troupes. Big or little, virtually all accent the inventions of each group leader.

The pantheon of creativity includes such widely known titans as Martha Graham, George Balanchine, Jerome Robbins, Alvin Ailey, Robert Joffrey, Alwin Nikolais, Merce Cunningham, Paul Taylor. Before them were the founders: Isadora Duncan, Ruth St. Denis, Ted Shawn. Coming up rapidly are such devisers of fresh expression as Twyla Tharp, Murray Louis and Rod Rodgers, who takes dance to inner-city streets.

Ballet is what most people think of first when dance is mentioned, and these companies indeed employ the most dancers. Biggest of all is the New York City Ballet, headed by Balanchine, with 94 dancers and a weekly fee on tour next year of $107,000.

Sidney Couple Loved Jamaica . . . But Found a 'Land of Fear'

By PAT DUFOUR

Times Staff

FRUSTRATING, TERRIFYING seven months ended with the Manions fleeing Jamaica and abandoning their $40,000 business. (Irving Strickland photo)

"Come to sunny Jamaica but be prepared to live in fear of losing your life and your life savings."

No travel poster would be so forthright.

But this is the way Mr. and Mrs. Paul Manion, of 11033 Dunne Road, in Sidney, would write such come-ons if they were allowed.

They went to Jamaica in August, 1975, after two previous visits. In love with the country, they planned to live there with their eight-year-old daughter Leslie.

They wanted to start a small business and contribute to the Jamaican economy.

They fled the country March 6, in fear of losing their lives and $40,000 poorer, thanks to bungling of recommended professionals and government officials working at cross purposes.

When they sold their resort in Lindsay, Ont., and headed for the languid lower latitudes, the Manions believed the Jamaican pitch that Canadians and Canadian investments are welcome. They didn't know that political posturing and uncontrolled violence would turn their seven months stay in Jamaica "into a frustrating, terrifying and very expensive seven-month holiday," acording to Manion.

They began to live in fear of their lives at 12:15 a.m. Feb. 2 when four Jamicans broke into their home at Runaway Bay, halfway between the tourist resorts of Montego Bay and Ocho Rios. The break-in was made by four men; one armed with a gun, another with a machete and the remaining two with bottles.

He and his wife Mango, described how they listened to the ransacking below as they and their daughter remained locked in the Manions' bedroom. Their gardener had cautioned them not to go below before he ran off in terror.

Because residential telephones are almost impossible to get on the Caribbean island, they had no means to call for help.

"They literally smashed through our bedroom door of wood, 2½ inches thick," Manion reports. "There I was with a gun at my head. They roughed me around . . . they were a fearful looking, excited gang."

On reporting the incident, the Manions found that three hours before their ordeal two American couples had been robbed in a driveway farther down the road, one of the men having to be hospitalized with a split head.

Manion described the nerve-tingling drive behind the police car he made when the four were reported getting off a mini-bus at Ocho Rios 22 miles away, the police car screaming ahead at between 80 and 90 miles an hour.

The men had been arrested, not for the two crimes, but because of their suspicious looks. One of them had been wearing the Disneyland hat belonging to the Manions' daughter while another was dressed in an expensive jacket belonging to Mrs. Manion.

The four were brought to court for the attack on the Americans and sentenced to four years hard labor. The Manions were told their case would be tried later because of its more serious nature.

A preliminary hearing was held and a trial date set for May 11. Meanwhile, however, the tension became unbearable. The four criminals were transferred to the prison near Runaway and made two escape attempts.

Manion appealed for police protection, both from the local police force and from the Canadian officials in Kingston. He was refused.

The Manions, in desperation, employed a bank guard, who was also a special constable, to police their property at night for $300 a month.

Manion said that on least five occasions when the constable went to the local police station to get a gun before reporting to their home he was told none was available. Because he was holding down two jobs he fell asleep much of the time.

"I never told my wife this," Manion said, "but I finally decided I couldn't risk their lives any longer after I read a man and his eight-year-old son had been murdered in their Kingston apartment. He, too, was to have been witness in a court case."

The four have yet to be brought into court for the Manion affair. The Manions, after leaving Jamaica, wanted the May 11 trial date changed. It was reset for Oct. 11 but still has yet to come before the courts.

The Manions were told they would have to return to Jamaica at their own expense if the trial was to be held. They refused, convinced they should have to bear no further financial expenses as a requisite for justice being meted out.

They heard no more until Margo Manion called Jamaica this week.

"I was informed the superintendent of police in Jamaica doesn't believe the expenses are warranted and that, on the previous charge, they (the four men) have been given four years hard labor."

The Manions had hoped to start a lubricant additives distribution business in Jamaica and their initial shipment, worth $28,000 Canadian dollars, lies unclaimed on the docks at Montego Bay.

Apart from the financial loss, the shipment represents the sorry end of months of frustration and broken promises by government officials.

When they first began working towards establishing a business, the Manions employed a chartered accountant named Stafford Owen, recommended to them to weave the way through all the red tape of government officialdom.

He said this was not needed. Register the company first and all the necessary work permits, import licence and other details would follow automatically, they were advised.

On Oct. 18, the Manions and Owen met with H. A. V. Edward of Jamaica's ministry of marketing and commerce. The Manions planned to return to Canada, bring back last-minute details.

They were told an import licence would be issued within three weeks. They travelled to Canada, returning to Jamaica Nov. 9, having paid $8,000 in duty and transport costs for their two cars.

They were then told there would be no licence. They started another round of government offices and were eventually given permission for an initial shipment worth $28,000. A licence was granted Dec. 9, Jamaica agreeing to the Manions' offer to pay for the shipment in Canadian money in order to be no drain on the Jamaican currency.

The shipment was ordered and prepaid.

Then came the next political stumbling block. The Manions were told by Morris Berry of the exchange control authority they couldn't carry on their business.

"Nothing happens in Jamaica without his authority, we learned," says Manion. "In fact, he's God. He felt this kind of business should be done by Jamaicans. In fact, his attitude was, you're young, you'll make out."

Finally Berry compromised. He said he would give the Manions six months to dispose of the merchandise, providing the labor department issued work permits.

The work permits were issued. The shipment left Canada the night of the break-in at the Manion home. They tried to stop the shipment but it was too late.

After the attack at his home, Manion said it became nerve-wracking driving a car, wondering if he would be shot at or his family harmed when he was not there.

Driven by fear to leave Jamaica, the Manions found a Kingston lawyer and his wife who were willing to act as their agents. Manion had checked with the chief customs officer at Montego Bay and been told it would cost about $600 in tariffs for the shipment on the Montego Bay dock. The Manions left $1,500 with their new agents to cover this, wharfage and other costs.

Early this April, the Manions were told the tariff costs were $16,000, not $600. Wharfage costs climbed each day the shipment remained there.

The Manions' bulging correspondence file includes scores of letters written to both Jamaican and Canadian external affairs departments.

They have sent cables, they have phoned, but the only response they've had is to the call Margo Manion made this week.

Even a seven-page appeal to Jamaican Prime Minister Michael Manley, sent June 28, has gone unanswered.

"We left Jamaica not owing a single cent," Manion says. "We're not wealthy people, we're not millionaires. We would have been doing something for the Jamaican economy. But the government's attitude seems to be small or large, let's grab it all."

He added, with bitterness, "Mr. Manley is in Canada this week, supposedly to improve Canadian-Jamaican relations . . . this is no way to do it."

Low-Hazard Cigarettes Urged

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A U.S. National Cancer Institute scientist is urging the tobacco industry to begin mass production of lower hazard cigarettes as a "potentially successful disease prevention opportunity."

Gio Gori, deputy director of NCI's division of cancer cause and prevention, said he realized his message might offend anti-smoking activists.

But smokers must be protected from their own habits, Gori told participants at a National Academy of Sciences symposium on the burden of illness.

"Leaving them to their fate is neither humane nor economical, particularly as we know that the risk of tobacco related disease can be reduced substantially," he said in a paper on smoking and related diseases.

THE MERRY MR. GROB

An International Master and Swiss Champion in 1939 and 1951, Henri Grob was a professional artist and a man of great humor and liveliness. He learned chess at 16, and the biggest triumph of his 70 years was placing first with Fine and Keres in the Ostend tournament of 1937 when he was 33.

Here's a theoretical contribution of his:

1. P-KN4. The idea is to play after 1. . .N-KB3; 2. P-N5; and if 1. . .P-Q4; 2.B-N2, BxP; 3.P-QB4. If Black decides to castle King's side, the open file can lead to a quick attack. This opening has many names: Alhausen, Brown, Clou, Colibri, Sampierdarena, the "spike" and the "bayonet attack", but it should be called "Grob's attack" because of the number of games he played by mail opening this way, and the two books he wrote on it.

One story old Chess Masters love to tell about Grob took place in Ostend in 1936. Gideon Stahlberg, a Swedish Grandmaster, and he decided to do the rounds of the Ostend cafes. They did their best to hit them all, dropping in at one place after another until finally the time arrived when it became very difficult to find another one still open in the dark and lonely streets.

At last Grob caught sight of a little light down an alley, and they made their erratic way toward it and went inside.

Rahter a strange sort of cafe, this! Walls and benches, very bare, no decorations about . . . Stahlberg banged on the wall loudly and demanded two glasses of beer.

"Can't be done," came a voice from the corner. "This is a police station."

(a) "A sacrifice of a pawn, innovated by Alapin, which gives White quick development for his minor pieces" says Paul Keres in his famous "Openings" Book.

(b) But Alapin recommended here 4.N-Q2 first.

(c) Remains a pawn up.

(d) Here Black should have played 11. . .BxNK4; 12.PxB; (if 12.NxB, NxN; 13. PxN, Q-Q4.) 12. . .BxN; 13. QxB, NxP; 14. B-N5ch, P-B3!; 15. BxPch, K-B1; and White will be obliged to sacrifice his Queen for a Rook and Bishop.

(e) 12. . .P-KN3 was best.

(f) If 14. . .PxN; 15.Q-R5, P-KN3; 16.BxNP, PxB; 17.Rx-Pch leads to mate.

(g) 22.N-N5 wins quickly.

(h) A bad blunder. With 25. . .K-N1, White would have had to work hard.

★ ★ ★

The solution to the problem above is: PxP, NxP; 2: P-K8-N mate; or 1. . .QxRch; 2. P-B8-N mate; or 1. . .RxP; 2.PxN-Q d.ch. mate; etc.

New Machine Keeps Tabs On Babies' Blood Oxygen

New York Times

Sensors gauge oxygen through baby's skin

NEW YORK — A West German wife-husband team of doctors has invented a device that promises to reduce significantly the number of common birth defects such as mental retardation and blindness that are caused by abnormal oxygen levels in the blood during and shortly after birth.

The device electronically monitors oxygen levels continuously in the body without the need to pierce the skin with a needle, as is now the case, thereby achieving one of medicine's longest sought goals.

Just 20 of the handmade devices, which measure perhaps the most vital single physiological function, now exist. They are being tested in selected hospitals throughout the world. At least one version of the device is expected to be available commercially in about one year.

Pediatricians who are knowledgable about early test results in European hospitals and in two American medical centres predict that use of the device will have a major impact on reducing the number of cases of mental retardation, brain damage and other forms of cerebral palsy caused by a deficiency of oxygen in the baby's blood. They predict a similar reduction in the cases of the blindness that results when the level of oxygen becomes too high.

The device, a skin sensor the shape and size of a nickel, has been tested on more than 1,000 infants and mothers in Germany by its developers, Dr. Renate Huch and Dr. Albert Huch of the University of Marburg.

The device is attached to the skin over the chest, much as is done when a doctor takes an electrocardiogram. The Huchs said in an article in the issue of Hospital Practice being published today that they have safely used the device attached to the scalp of fetuses during childbirth, sometimes for hours before birth.

The device is also expected to open up new horizons for medicine's understanding of normal physiological events during childbirth and the first few hours of life. Doctors say that even today they have relatively crude knowledge about the rapid adjustment of the human body from passive fetus in the womb to a screaming, squirming infant struggling to survive in the outside world.

Doctors contend that a more thorough physiological understanding is essential to the development of better ways to prevent and to treat the many conditions that show up later in childhood or in adult life but that were caused by damage occurring silently during and just after birth.

Further, the Huchs said that they expected surgeons and cardiologists to apply the device to monitor the oxygen level in adult patients such as those who have had major operations, heart attacks and blood clots in the legs or lungs. They are trying to adapt the device to measure the carbon dioxide level in the blood, another important physiological function.

Dr. Renate Huch said in a telephone interview that Dagwin Seiler, an engineer member of the team, had made the devices by hand at a cost of $1,000 each, and that doctors were testing them at Babies Hospital at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center here and at the University of California at San Francisco.

"It's a tremendously important advance," said Dr. L. Stanley James in an interview just before he left for an international meeting in Upsala, Sweden, where the Huchs discussed their new tool. James is a leading pediatric researcher whose colleagues have tested the Huchs' device on 100 babies over the last 18 months at Babies Hospital.

James said the Huchs' device was "made like a jewel."

The device consists of platinum and silver pieces measured in billionths of an inch, through which a tiny current flows. The platinum is heated to raise the skin temperature to 104 degrees Fahrenheit.

This process speeds blood flow through the small area of skin and allows the device to measure the amount of oxygen at the skin surface, which the Huchs have found to correlate "very closely" with the oxygen level in the blood.

The Huchs have reported a time lag of 10 seconds between a change in the baby's oxygen level and its detection on a recorder. The lag is 20 seconds longer in adults because their skin is thicker.

To measure oxygen levels now, pediatricians generally stick a needle into the thin artery of a sick baby with a small risk of resultant bleeding, clots and infection.

The new method allows a continuous measurement without the pain and dangers of repeated needle thrusts, providing a "movie" instead of a "snapshot" picture of the amount of oxygen available to feed the billions of cells in the brain and other organs that are so critically dependent on oxygen.

As a result, doctors and nurses have data immediately at hand and can make decisions much more rapidly about the therapies that they tailor to the needs of each infant.

Premature Babies' Outlook Good

HAMILTON (CP) — It's a fight to save the tiny ones — the babies born weighing less than three pounds, looking so fragile that it appears every breath may be their last.

It's a highly specialized art to pull them through the first weeks of life — a mixture of highly techical equipment, sophisticated laboratory work and the constant care and attention of nurses and doctors.

Many of them make it. But do these babies become normal children, or are the talent and money used to keep them alive merely generating the need for more talent and money to deal with a lifetime of handicaps?

At McMaster University Medical Centre, evidence from a clinic that has been following such babies for three years indicates the outlook is good.

"It looks as if most of them are fine," said child psychologist Dr. Linda Siegel. "A good many of them are fully caught up by one year, and some earlier."

About 150 babies with a birth weight of less than three pounds have been treated in the neo-natal intensive care unit at the medical centre since it opened.

Some of them were premature, others were in trouble because of problems the mother had and many had respiratorty difficulties.

While the follow-up clinic is compiling research data on how the children develop, its principal function is that of service, said Dr. Sardj Brigal, a specialist in newborns.

"It reassures the parents that the child is developing normally and it leads to early identication of many problems," he said.

The Ontario Mental Health Foundation is providing $16,000 a year for detailed study of development of such children.

"Any delay in development is usually consistent with the degree of prematurity," Dr. Seigal said. "Language has been a bit delayed with many of these children, but it requires long term follow up to see if it is just a delay or a deficiency."

The children seem to catch up faster mentally than they do with motor co-ordination — such things as walking or being able to use their fingers for intricate tasks.

The outlook for babies who need intensive care at birth improves every year as better methods are found to care for them, Dr. Siegel said.

An important change has been allowing parents, brothers and sisters into the premature nursery to help care for the baby — to touch and handle the infant, even if the child has to remain in a respirator.

Since many of these babies don't go home until they are two months old, early contact is important.

Some parents who can't be there as much as they would like make tape recordings of different members of the family talking to the infant and the tapes are played inside the respirator.

THE PILL ALTERS ALCOHOL

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — Researchers have found that women who take birth control pills stay high on alcohol longer than women who are not on the pill. The finding may show hormone ups and downs in a woman's body change the way alcohol affects her.

A recent research project at the Oklahoma Center for Alcohol and Drug Related Studies also may lead to studies that will help women alcoholics, according to associate director Ben Morgan Jones, an assistant professor of psychiatry and behavioral sciences.

Women reach higher peak alcohol blood levels than men and reached them sooner, the researchers said.

But women who were not on the pill showed no blood alcohol an average of 4¼ hours after one stiff drink, while women on the pill took about 5½ hours before they showed no alcohol in their blood. The men's group showed an average of about 4¾ hours.

"The finding that women taking oral contraceptives metabolize alcohol slower may imply that estrogen or other hormones may decrease the rate of alcohol metabolism," Jones said.

Making fashion pull its weight! . . .

Several of our friends appear periodically in smashing new outfits which leave us drooling . . . and thinking, catty-like, "how on earth does she afford it?" . . . Well, one day we came right out and asked the source of a particular outfit . . . and you could have knocked us over with a puff-ball when we learned it had been purchased for a mere song at "Twice Around" Fashions . . . a store we never dreamed was anything but what it looks like . . . a very nice little dress shop! . . . It is this of course . . . but the dresses, suits, coats, blouses, pants, etc., etc. . . . every single one a quality fashion item in immaculate condition . . . is there on consignment for re-sale . . . by ladies who, for one reason or another, have made a "mistake" . . . put on a bit too much weight . . . found the color didn't flatter them . . . or whatever . . . Mrs. Empey, who started "Twice Around" Fashions, believes that quality is worth repeating . . . so clothes . . . (some of which have never been worn even once!) bearing labels like Hettemarks, Bleyle, Dynasty, Deja and so on . . . find their way to her shop . . . are tagged at a fraction of their original price . . . and are snapped up by discriminating ladies who have an eye for fashion and quality . . . This week we saw a lady wearing a $300 Ultrasuede pant suit she's picked up for $70! . . . Why not go see for yourself? . . . "Twice Around" Fashions, 1029 Cook St., 383-3123.

AIB No Broken Vow: Frances Elford

elizabeth forbes

Did the federal Liberal government go back on an election promise made in 1974 (as many people insist) when it imposed, a year later, wages and price controls?

Or, was there a qualifying clause in the promise that made it clear, if future need arose, a contingency plan, based on controls, was ready and waiting in the wings, and would be used?

Those questions surfaced the other morning, when I was having a casual cup of coffee with Francis Elford — and her answers were clear and to the point.

Frances, you will remember, ran as a Liberal candidate for Victoria in the 1974 federal election. Today, she is the extremely busy regional vice-president on Lower Vancouver Island, for the Liberal Party in British Columbia.

Certainly there was a contingency plan, she says, recommended by the Young Commission, and it was frequently mentioned during the election.

Then she reminded me that prior to 1974, the federal prices and income commission, headed by economist John Young, recommended that high level business and union leaders be invited to meet with government, to grapple with Canada's economic problems.

Idea behind this was to arrive at a consensus as to the best method of solving those problems "keeping in mind Canada's position in world markets, the size of the economic 'pie' and how all groups in society must be protected and assured of a fair share of that pie."

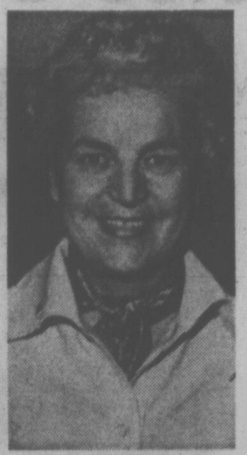
In mid-74 "this seemed to be a sensible approach." So, the federal government went to the electorate on a platform "that reasonable people aware of the many ramifications could sit down together and work things out."

Unfortunately, the tri-level discussions did not reach a consensus, Mrs. Elford says.

"Neither labor nor business was convinced that there was a need for active intrusion into the economy."

In the United States, business and labor recognized the need for restraint, and demands and expectations were much lower in 1975.

"If, in Canada, the same trend had taken place we would not have needed controls," she added. "But unfortunately, by the fall of 1975, wage demands had reached exhorbitant heights and the expectations of all wage earners, owners of property, and those who enjoyed profits, simply sky-rocketed."



ELFORD
. . . record clear

That's when the federal government resorted to the contingency plan recommended more than a year before.

Guidelines were established for control of prices, profits, incomes, dividends and professional fees. Spending restraint was adopted as a policy by the federal government itself and "every province agreed to support the program and to apply guidelines in areas of provincial concern — such as rents."

Turning from the past to the present, Mrs. Elford then spoke of the first annual report of the Anti-Inflation Board tabled last week in the Commons.

It record that by July, this year, the annual rate of increase in the Consumer Price Index had dropped to 6.8%. Wages and other incomes had been restrained.

More than half of the agreements and settlements reported to the board had been within guidelines that allowed for a basic increase of 8% plus 2% as a share of national productivity growth.

Another 2% could be added, or subtracted, depending on whether a group had kept up with, or fallen behind, the cost of living before the program began.

Target for the first year of the program was to bring inflation down from a rate of 10.8% to 8% or less "and that goal has been reached", Frances pointed out.

Here she put her coffee cup down with enough force to emphasize her belief that "it would have been very irresponsible if the government had failed to act when it became apparent that Canadians were not prepared to discipline themselves to show restraint and to voluntarily slow down in purchases, in wage demands and in profit taking."

Today the facts show that (in 1976) prices have gone up less than wages.

"This means that working Canadians have more buying power than before the program began."

Canadians on fixed incomes "especially those dependent largely on pensions not indexed to increases in the cost of living, have benefitted less, but they too are still infinitely better off than if inflation had continued at its 1975 run-away rate."

That some people feel the federal government should not have introduced its program "is really not important", Frances Elford concluded.

It is important, however, "that inflation is no longer spiralling out of control and almost all Canadians are better off as a result!"

Dear Lynn and Joel:

Are coffee grounds of any nutritional value to plants? — O.H.

Dear O.H.:

There are some acid-loving plants that can benefit from coffee grounds, such as azaleas and geraniums. We recommend that you don't feed your plants table scraps. There are many "home remedies," but if you are just learning to feel comfortable in the Plant Experience, it's better not to tempt the fates. Much of what you hear about feeding the plants human-food, beer or wine, eggshells, or even inserting nails into the soil is more gimminky than practical and makes a mess of our homes and those of the plants as well.

PET CEMETERIES RAPIDLY EXPANDING

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The National Association of Pet Cemeteries recently held its fifth annual convention here, attended by about 135 pet cemetery owners from United States.

"The idea of pet cemeteries isn't new," said Patricia Blosser, executive director of the association.

"It goes all the way back to the Egyptian pharaohs. But our association right now is one of the fastest-growing trade groups in the country."

Mrs. Blosser and her husband Robert operate a boarding kennel and grooming parlor for dogs in Elgin, Ill. They also operate a pet cemetery there, one of 418 listed in the U.S.

Of pets receiving cemetery burials or cremations, 75 per cent are dogs, 24 per cent cats and one per cent miscellaneous, with horses the most common in the latter category, Mrs. Blosser said.

KNIT & CHAT

Mitts, Scarves on Agenda

By MAY E. MacLEAN

There was a decided nip to the air this morning, reminding us once again that the warmer days are almost over! Time for mitts, caps and scarves for those that have to go to school or are out every day. Now that the children have returned to school, life settles down to a routine pattern, so that you can plan on knitting or crocheting these items.

My pattern No. 6727 is one of the most useful leaflets that I have in my series. It gives directions for mitts, knitted on two needles in 10 sizes from tots of two years to men's size eight and a half and in several different styles. Some ribbed wrists, others with gauntlets, and also ideas for using up odd colours. You'll find this leaflet most useful.

No. 6814 gives directions for snug fitting helmets for ladies and girls, as well as the balaclava type helmets for men and boys. These are the pull over the head type helmet, sung fitting ribbed neck, and around the face edge, which is the only part of the head exposed. These are great for men who enjoy or work in the outdoors!

No. 6815 gives directions for men and boy's toques, and a "Quaker" style helmet for ladies and teens, as well as a spiral lace stitch snug fitting cap for ladies in three sizes. These types of toques and caps are just what are needed for the windy days ahead.

If you are looking for a French Canadian type stocking cap, in both the girl's and boy's styles, these are on Leaflet No. 6830, along with pixie hoods for girls 6 to 10 years, and ladies' sizes. There are other styles on the same leaflet.

Instructions for the face protector helmets, where only the mouth and eyes are exposed, can be found on leaflet No. 6831. Thiis type of helmet can be rolled up into a beanie when this extra protection is not needed. Sizes given are for men and boys. A Brioche helmet in two sizes, ladies and girls, is also on this same leaflet, along with a ear-fitting headband which is so popular with skiers.

Pullovers with shawl collars in a "his and hers" matching set are this week's pattern. Effectively knitted in a simple four-row rib pattern with a tweedy wool on number seven needles, you'll find these pullovers will knit up very fast. Matching or contrasting double knitting wool is used for the shawl collars and bands.

A complete range of sizes are given on the one leaflet. Children's sizes 6-8-10. Ladies' sizes 12-14-16 fitting bust measurements of 32 to 36 inches, and men's sizes 38-40-42 fitting those chest measurements.

To order Leaflet No. 0176 or any other leaflet mentioned, send fifty cents in coin, PLUS a stamped self-addressed return envelope, long one if possible. If you do not have a stamp or envelope, please enclose an extra quarter and print your name and address. Send to: May E. MacLean, "Knit and Chat," c-o Box B, 486 Montford Dr., Dollard des Ormeaux, P.Q. H9G 1M6.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers when ordering and to enclose your stamped return envelope for faster mailing. Allow about two weeks for normal delivery.

New Approach To Gall Stones

By LESTER B. COLEMAN, M.D.

The possibility that gall bladder stones may be dissolved by taking an oral medication is close to being a reality.

A chemical agent known as "chenic acid" (cheno-deoxycholic) is being tried at the Mayo Clinic in Minnesota and at the Cedars Sinai Medical Centre in Los Angeles. For almost 10 years, this drug has been experimented with in various forms, for this purpose.

Some tiny stones have, in experimental animals, been dissolved. The chemical reaction, unfortunately, can still cause some toxic responses. Therefore it is being used with great care in humans.

It is expected that more than a thousand patients with gall stones will be carefully selected and studied within the next two years. Hopefully, side effects will be minimized and the advantages increased.

Certain highly malignant cancerous tumors of the long bones may make amputation necessary.

A brilliantly conceived idea may prevent such amputations and yet remove a cancerous tumor.

Dr. Frank F. Parrish of the Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute in Houston, has been using cadaver bones that have been banked and prepared for this purpose.

Bones are obtained from one who has been killed in an accident or by a gunshot wound.

In a very complicated way, the bones are prepared and then fashioned to fit the individual need of the patient. Rejection of such a transplant has been reduced to a minimum.

In some instances, the results have been spectacular.

The child born with an active thyroid gland may suffer from arrested physical development or even mental retardation if the condition is not discovered early.

Dr. A. F. Parlow, at the University of California in Los Angeles, has developed a technique with an anti-serum that can save up to three weeks in diagnosing such a thyroid problem.

When found, the thyroid hormone is immediately used, thus preventing the severe damage that can be caused by delay.

Even happy occasions can sometimes be associated with accidents. Calling attention to these hazards is not meant to minimize the joy, but rather to offer protection against mishaps.

Despite all the warnings that have been ooffered about the dangers of opening champagne bottles, reports continue to come in about severe eye injuries caused by the bullet-like velocity with which a cork sometimes pops out of a bottle.

Any bottle pressurized by gas should first be covered with a protective napkin before opening. Secondly, the bottle should not be "aimed" at anyone, but rather at a blank wall.

A 14-year-old boy was brought to the emergency room of my hospital with just such a face injury. His father, celebrating a birthday, had barely missed destroying his son's eye.

Checked His Guns On Wedding Night

DEAR ABBY: I just read about the girl who spent most of her honeymoon writing thank-you notes for her wedding gifts. Well, I've got that one beat.

On my wedding night the dude I married sat up all night loading and unloading shotguns. When I finally got him to come to bed, all he did was fall asleep.

I should have known he was a dingbat right then and there, but he'd been awfully good to me before we were married; he was a perfect gentleman, and he never laid a hand on me.

He's a millionaire and hardly ever works. He bought me a car, a real fur coat and a diamond watch. I think he's a dope eater because he's high for a spell then fades fast. He's 40 and I'm 24, and have my whole life ahead of me. The big problem is that he doesn't care one thing about sex and I do. He swore if he ever caught me with another dude, he'd kill me. I'm his fifth wife. Should I stick around or not?

EVERYTHING BUT LOVE

DEAR EVERYTHING: So far, your marriage reads like a Hitchcock thriller, but you'll have to write the ending yourself. Stick around if you like, but a man who threatens to kill is more than a dingbat. He's dangerous.

DEAR ABBY: While watching a baseball game with two of my girlfriends, some boys from another town asked us how old we were.

One girl said she was 13, and the other said she was 14. They're both 12.

The girl who said she was 14 was trying to get a boyfriend. I think if a girl wants a boyfriend she should give her right age, don't you?

TWELVE AND HONEST

DEAR TWELVE: Honesty is always the best policy. Lying about one's age can become habit-forming. Teenagers add a year or two, but after 40, they start subtracting.

DEAR ABBY: With reference to the letter from the woman who said she liked her neighbors but was satisfied with her own religion and resented their trying to sell her on theirs (Mormon).

That sweet woman had only to say to the young missionaries, "Thank you, but no thank you," and that would have been the end of it.

We as members are asked to extend friendship to neighbors, to tell them about the Gospel and to be missionaries wherever we are, in the way we live and act—by example.

Our missionaries apply no pressure, knowing that man was given his free agency to choose his own religion.

We are converts to the Church of Jesus Christ Latter-day Saints, and can attest to the fact that our conversion has brought harmony, happiness and fulfillment to our entire family.

GLAD WE LISTENED

DEAR ABBY: Why don't they proclaim a national Daughter-in-Law Day to honor all those daughters-in-law who do things for their mothers-in-law because their own daughters are too busy to bother with them?

I have just had another one of those Mother's Days, and I don't think I could face another one. I invited my mother-in-law to my home for dinner when she let me know that her own daughters hadn't planned anything "special."

I was raised to respect my elders and to honor my parents (my own mother is deceased), so I was glad to have her.

Well, behind my back she invited her own children to come to MY home for dinner! They all "surprised" me, fed their fat faces, told Mom how "wonderful" she looked, and then left. Not one of them lifted a finger to help me, and nobody even said thanks.

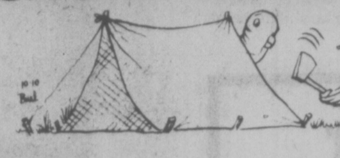
To top it off, my mother-in-law is always bragging about what "terrific" children she has, and she doesn't even LIKE me.

In case you're wondering how I managed to feed a flock of unexpected company, I sent out for six buckets of chicken.—MARIA HAS HAD IT

DEAR MARIE: OK. Let's hear it for daughters-in-law out there!

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER



DEAR DR. MILLER: My birds seem still to be thoroughly enjoying their outdoor aviary. How soon do I have to bring them inside? They have a place out there where they can keep dry. — C. DeA.

DEAR C. DeA.: To offer the best protection, that dry area should also be well-protected on three sides from prevailing winds. How long they can stay out depends not only on their present housing, but on how severe the weather actually is and on the species of bird. A parakeet can cope with more than a canary, for example, but doves would do still better. There's little logic in leaving your feathered friends out in miserable weather to see if they can survive it, but if they're happy and comfortable being left out longer, why not?

DEAR DR. MILLER: Would it be out of the question for African mouth breeders to breed in a community tank? The tank's a nice size and well-planted. — P. Y.

DEAR P. Y.: Even though African mouth breeders are prolific, given a chance, they would be unlikely to breed in a community tank. They don't belong there anyway. They're big — to seven inches as an adult — and belligerent.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Gertie, my garter snake, isn't getting much of my time now. I'm too busy at school. What's the least amount of time I have to spend on her a day so she won't be neglected? — B. B.

DEAR B. B.: Fortunately for Gertie, she can get by on mighty little. If necessary, your snake should survive on a scrub-up, supper and socialization schedule averaging ten minutes a day.

DEAR DR. MILLER: A friend says you're against feeding grass to cats. What kind of sense does this make? My cats get a lot of grass, and they'd have a lot of trouble with hairballs and chicken bones if they didn't. — J. J.

DEAR J. J.: For non-domesticated cats, grass is a useful, even lifesaving, addition to the diet. Long, coarse strands of grass will help remove hairballs, and similar strands can wrap around bone splinters in the digestige tract, helping to prevent damage to the walls of the stomach and intestines. For the average feline housepet, however, grass (particularly the coarse variety found outside which is most useful in the above conditions) shouldn't be essential. In fact, it's more likely to be harmful. Hairballs can easily be prevented by grooming, or removed with the use of petrolatum products. Should the housecat consume chicken bones or similarly hazardous tidbits, grass could help — but it doesn't always work.

Damage and obstruction may occur even with grass, so it's far better if the cat never receives the bones in the first place. Besides, grass is frequently contaminated with pesticides or various other chemical pollutants which makes it a potential poisoner, itself. Finally, quantities of this coarse grass can cause many gastrointestinal upsets on its own ranging from severe vomiting to diarrhea, or complete intestinal obstruction.

Moving Statistics

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Residents of the United States, Canada and Australia are likely to move at least 12 times during their lifetimes, according to a U.S. government study.

The authors of the census bureau study, Dr. Larry Long and Celia Buertlein, say the mobility rates of these three nations are among the highest in the world.

Long and Boertlein believe that the transitory nature of the Americans, Canadians and Australians is probably linked to their pioneering ancestors.

The spirit of moving from one residence to another appears deeply engrained in the people of each nation, they said.

They also said that once an individual has moved, he finds it easier to move again. Thus, the pattern of mobility perpetuates itself.

DOG, MASTER SIDE BY SIDE

WIMBLEDON, England (CP) — Scruffy, the miniature sheepdog, and his master Jim Whiffen are together forever — buried in the same grave.

Mrs. Agnes Whiffen said that when Scriffy died 18 years ago Jim was heartbroken and had him stuffed.

When Jim died at the age of 70, his relatives thought it would be nice if Scruffy was buried beside him.

IQ Tests' Validity Doubted

TORONTO (CP) — Psychologists no longer put much store in IQ—intelligence quotient—tests, but some school officials still do and it is creating problems for their students.

When IQ tests were first used about 50 years ago everyone thought they could predict a child's success through school. Those with high IQs were expected to excel and pressure was put on them.

If a student had a low IQ, teachers didn't demand too much of him and expected him to fail or drop out early.

Today, psychologists say the tests can be one indication of how well a student will do in school but that they don't measure intelligence.

"Really, the tests rank the students with respect to certain tasks and in relation to their peers," said Edward Brown, head of the Toronto Board of Education's psychological services.

IQ tests are based on verbal skills, such as reading and understanding certain words, as well as mathematical skills, such as problem-solving and abstract reasoning.

The IQ is the calculation of the mental age over the chronological age multiplied by 100. If a six-year-old has an IQ of 150, it means he can do the work of a normal nine-year-old. By the time the child is 12 the gap has opened wider and he can do the work of a normal 18-year-old.

The tests may be fairly accurate indicators of how well a child will do because they are based on skills that are important in the public school system. However, they do not test such aspects of intelligence as memory, human understanding and creativity, Mr. Brown said.

The accuracy of the tests might be in doubt if the student was unhappy at home, or even if he didn't have a good breakfast.

If the child had difficulty reading English, or if he had any learning or perceptual problems, his test results could be misleadingly low.

"There is just no way to get into the mind of a student and tell if he is intelligent," said H. J. Dilling, director of research for the Scarborough board of education.

Some school boards are playing down the importance of the tests.

The Toronto school board dropped the group IQ test because "it just wasn't useful," Mr. Brown said. But the board still uses the IQ as one of a battery of tests given to individual students if they are having learning problems.

Mr. Dilling said that IQ tests given to Canadian children are based on North American cultural references and therefore are unfair to immigrant children or those whose upbringing is influenced by foreign cultures.

Petroleum From Coal Seen Soon

SYDNEY, Australia (CP)—Australia researchers have produced economic yields of liquid fuels from coal in smallscale laboratory tests.

They are constructing a bigger experimental plant for further tests and, if these are successful, they believe commercial firms may be producing petroleum from coal in the late 1980s.

The scientists, from the Australian Commonwealth Scientific and Industrial Research Organization, (CSIRO) are using a flash pyrolysis method.

Their small-scale experiments have regularly produced a yield of 20 per cent by weight of liquid fuel from coal, a rate that would make liquefaction a practical proposition if scaled up successfully.

But Anthony Bradshaw, deputy director of CSIRO's mineral research laboratories, said this is where the doubt exists.

"One has to be cautious because sometimes thermal efficiencies do not scale up" he said. "What you do on a smallscale rig is not necessarily duplicated in large commercial plants."

Pyrolysis is heating coal in an inert atmosphere to drive off volatile matter as gas. Part of this gas is condensed into tar, which can be treated to produce gasoline or light fuel oils.

Surplus gases can be recycled to feed the process. The residual product is char.

"Even the char is useful for generation of electricity," Bradshaw said.

"In fact, the amount of char the process produces provides one problem for the future: there will be so much char we will have to find new uses for it. It will be possible to convert existing power generating plants to char but their consumption would be insufficient to consume it all."

More Needed Arts Space 'Bombed Out'

audrey johnson

In a certain way Victoria reminds me of wartime embattled Britain when bombs kept falling and buildings disappeared but the British carried right on with their inconvenienced lives.

Bombs are dropped repeatedly into the cultural life of Victoria and buildings, figuratively speaking, disappear, but the artists and crafts people manage to keep going in ever-increasing numbers, scarcely pausing to register their frustrations, anxieties and insuperable space problems.

Just a little over two weeks ago there broke upon us the Universities Council's biased recommendation that destroyed, for the time being at least, UVic's almost realized hopes for an urgently needed new music wing.

★ ★ ★

The Conservatory of Music, bursting at the seams, continues to get nowhere with eliciting government assistance toward more adequate accommodation, and the only low-cost downtown performance centre, Open Space, continually in use since its opening five years ago, has had to suspend operation as there are no funds available to carry out necessary improvements.

But the latest bombshell came Friday with announcement that The Belfry Cultural Centre will close its doors within the next few weeks. Shock waves from this announcement will reverberate widely and loss of the facility will have a crippling effect in many quarters.

Until this week, Belfry directors had understood that their request for a Local Initiatives Program grant was approved and that Belfry was on the list of organizations to receive 1976-77 grants.

★ ★ ★

With growing audiences and more and more people seeking to use the space the Belfry seemed to have a good and useful future. It was felt that another year would probably see the Belfry a self-supporting operation. But in the meantime the LIP grant would be needed to help cover staff salaries and other expenses.

However a committee in Ottawa had given the Belfry request a low priority rating and finally eliminated it.

★ ★ ★

All these blows are coming at a time when this area is mushrooming culturally, when all sorts of interesting and valuable growth is taking place, restricted only by our space inadequacies. The Belfry, and before it, Open Space, has been gratefully utilized by the Conservatory, Bastion Theatre, Camosun College, the B.C. Drama Association, various chamber ensembles, dance groups, folk, country and rock groups, jazz artists, classical recitalists and ethnic groups.

Victoria's symphony has been in serious need of proper rehearsal quarters for many years. (It may also be without a concert hall it can use if some action isn't soon taken to begin restoration of the dilapidated Royal Theatre).

★ ★ ★

At the Conservatory teachers and students have to be warned off using the furnace-room, but every other nook and closet is utilized and many valuable projects have to be shelved for lack of space.

Bastion Theatre has not been able to institute and maintain a studio program, which is a flourishing accompaniment to professional theatre in most Canadian cities.

Maurice Harty, the accomplished director of Camosun College's professional actor training program, is hampered by lack of a central, intimate type of theatre facility for public productions which are a necessary part of his program. With Open Space and now Belfry gone, his forthcoming production will be staged in the McPherson Playhouse.

This, the best and almost only facility we now have, is both too big and too expensive for Harty's or Bastion studio purposes and consequently limits them to only one or two performances of a play when the proper situation where students are being used, or any learning group, is multiple performance.

But all the people who might be in a position to alleviate the general distressing situation in this city are, it seems, deaf and blind.

Planners, developers, members of governing bodies from municipal to provincial level, carry on putting up buildings, developing fancy shopping malls, arranging land use with no consideration whatsoever for what is in effect a major industry and a priceless influence on the quality of life in this region.

Observant and intelligent people see the future as brightest for Greater Victoria if it develops as the artistic centre of Western Canada. Unfortunately the people who could help to move us in that direction don't share the vision.

Music Medals

Silver medals awarded annually in Royal Conservatory of Music Toronto examinations have been won by three Victoria students: Loree Green for Grade I singing; Sandra J. Foweraker for Grade V speech arts, and Diana J. Scott for Grade II flute.

The Conservatory has also awarded Frederick Harris Scholarships to Victorians Mrs. Louise Holland for Grade VIII organ; Theresa Lowe, Grade VI piano, and Diana Scott, flute.

Organ Recital

First of a series of organ recitals at Shawnigan Lake School will be given Wednesday by the school's organist and choirmaster, Herman Bergink, at 8 p.m. in the school chapel.

He will perform works by Bach, Haydn and the contemporary Dutch composer, Jan Zwart, and will improvise on hymn tunes submitted by the audience.

Bergink has been provincial carillonneur since 1968 and gives frequent carillon recitals throughout the year in Victoria.

Craftsmen and Artists At Work in the Gallery

WAICHI NAKANO . . . displays Origami talent

The popular annual showcase, Craftsmen and Artists at Work, is poised for another invasion of Victoria Art Gallery. It begins Thursday at 7:30 p.m. and continues through to 5 p.m. Sunday.

The Women's Committee project, which last year drew 6,000 persons and added a considerable sum to the gallery's cultural fund, has its emphasis on crafts this year with several not-seen-before skills being shown and demonstrated.

Among these are Hideko Nakano, who will show Sogetsu (flower arranging) and her husband, Waichi Nakano, whose nimble fingers will illustrate the sculptural skill of Origami (paper folding). The couple came here from Japan within the last five years.

Candle-making is another of the new skills being shown and the artist with wax is Doris Bernard. Sherry Fisher will demonstrate an art currently experiencing revival — quilt-making.

Another revived craft — Macrame — will undoubtedly be an attention-getter as demonstrated by Dee Russell; Keith Gage-Cole, who makes "Sandalman Sandals" in Market Square, will, with Arnie Michaud, show the crafting of leather items such as shoes, bags and leather clothing.

Harry Schaefer recently returned from eight months in Europe, where he studied stone cutting and jewelry manufacture. He will provide an exhibit of carved ivory and jewelry.

Others involved are Ingrid Wolsk, who specializes in fashion designing and will demonstrate spinning and dyeing techniques; Peggy Barhtolomew, crewel embroidery; Len Bentham and Esme Davis, basketry; Anne Tresize and Esme Davis, calligraphy; Alan Browning, canning; Ukrainian Community, egg decorating; Freidel Waelti, tapestry embroidery; E. Oliver Harvey, fly tying; Bernie Bowker, framing; Jim Ham, instrument making; Robin Steffanick, Dick Henson and Muriel Welsh, pottery; Jim Mallett and Malia Lavinia, weaving.

Arts include watercolors demonstrated by Judith Essenson; portraiture, T. Andriessen Booth; pen and ink drawing, John Beresford; photography, James Fielding, and sculpture, Patrick McCarthey.

A popular feature of the show is the gift shop where samples of demonstrators' work is displayed for sale. Hand-made Christmas decorations and toys are an addition this year.

Viewing hours for the show are, Thursday, 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Friday, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Admission is $1; children with adults 25 cents; students and pensioners 50 cents.

AT THE GALLERIES

Three decades of symbolic expressionism from the work of Herbert Siebner and selected works of yesterday by Karl Spreitz comprise the dual exhibition which will open at Utley's Art Galleries Friday.

There will be a preview and reception to meet the artists on that day from 5:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. The showing will continue at Utley's, located at 9182 East Saanich Road (just off McTavish), until Nov. 25. Gallery hours Tuesday to Sunday are 11:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

A new dimension is being added to Karibu Gallery, 565 Johnson, with the opening of an "upper gallery" offering free display facilities for local artists. Individuals and clubs should enquire about arrangements for showings.

Karibu is housed in a nearly century-old building across the street from Market Square and has up to now concentrated on displays of African tribal art.

The new gallery will be inaugurated with an exhibition of paintings by Salt Spring Island artist, Evelyn Napper. Her paintings in acrylics, oils and watercolors are concerned with the lines and moods of B.C. mountains, coastal landscapes and seascapes. They will be on view from this weekend through Nov. 10. Hours including Sunday, are 2 p.m. to 4 p.m.

The Emily Carr Arts Centre, 207 Government, is again offering various classes, including children's Saturday morning discovery sessions, pre-school children's art, basic and advanced painting and drawing, Chinese art, sculpture and life drawing.

Full information can be obtained by calling 382-4922.

'THE FRONT'

Shallow Treatment of Dark Theme

ALLEN
. . . ego-trips

A Movie Review By Nora Hutchison

The Front, a sort of comedy about mistaken identity, is set in the McCarthy era, one of the most damaging periods in the history of America's entertainment industry , when entertainers, directors and writers lived in terror of being labeled a "pinko". Any sort of comedy about those bizarre and harrowing witchhunts seems in itself to be faintly ludicrous, but comedy is still the only acceptable and safe vehicle through which the Americans who fell victim to the crusading spirit of McCarthy and his compatriots can exorcise their anger and paranoia.

In the early 1950's, the fear of an "international conspiracy" hung thick in the air, and the movie and television industries, desperately trying to avoid any connections with so-called "sympathizers", were more than willing to co-operate with the government, the FBI, and numerous private organizations engaged in sniffing out the "Communist intellectuals".

Nobody could be certain they weren't trying to infiltrate their scripts or performances with anti-American propaganda, so America was criss-crossed with watchdogs who pulled in anyone they felt uncomfortable with. Sadly, all that the investigations really proved was that those who were promoting the Socialist cause were sympathetic to a romantic vision. Few of them knew anything about the horrors of the Stalinist state. They were caught out defending a naive illusion.

The Front is the collaborative effort of director Martin Ritt, and screen-writer Walter Bernstein, both blacklisted in the early '50's, who wanted to make a film about the injustices done to others like themselves but without getting too political. Bernstein, who actually sold his scripts through a "front" after being blacklisted, must have thought that the comic possibilities built-in to a case of mistaken identity could carry the message.

Ritt and Bernstein set up as their central character, an ineffectual little two-bit bookie and bar cashier named Howie who is played, in a fairly straight fashion, by Woody Allen. Howie willingly lends his name to a pal, a big-time TV writer who has been blacklisted, and he becomes a "front" with 10 per cent off the top for playing the game.

Before he really has it figured out, Howie is "fronting" for two more TV writers, including a confessed Communist, has moved up to a lush apartment, and is seeing a well-bred Connecticut girl who works as an assistant TV producer. Howie's "scripts" are causing a sensation at the network, and he's a celebrated enfant terrible, until an investigation unit called Freedom Information. led by a rat-like character called Francis X. Hennessey, puts him under surveillance.

Howie, of course, is completely apolitical — he's just interested in the money and the girls, and he's getting to like the idea of being considered a literary star. And while he's getting off on the ego-trips, the movie works as a comedy. But half way through, Ritt and Bernstein change direction, and it begins to feel like one of those Frank Capra movies from the '40s like Mr. Smith Goes to Washington or Mr. Deeds Goes to Town, in which the common man decides to face up to his responsibilities and choose between right and wrong.

Howie has to decide whether to refuse to inform on his writer friends and risk going to jail, or to tell members of the House Un-American Activities Committee all he knows, and live with shame and the prosperity. All at once, the movie seizes up, and collapses, in a series of jerky, spasmodic episodes of soul-searching.

Woody Allen's Howie character is the only life the movie has. His myopic stare, the particular faint grin — part cowardice, part tentative braggart — and the hesitant delivery brings everything out of an exchange like — "Howie, I've been blacklisted." "Okay, but you do feel okay?" Otherwise, the movie has an odd, stagey quality — the lines hold awkward pauses around them, and the sequences don't flow together, they bump into each other. Though Howie has several dimensions, the other characters, a black-listed TV comic (Zero Mostel), the scriptwriter, Howie's girl, the FBI spys and the network executives are no more than paper-cut-out good and bad guys.

To affect us as either a political statement or a black comedy, the movie needed to convey something of the paranoia that America felt about the "Red Menace". To see that era as both sad and ludicrous — we need to have something tangible to react to, but the director and screenwriter made no attempt to develop this atmosphere or describe the psychology of Howie's writer friends. Maybe they thought it was enough to seaparate the victims from the oppressors, knowing that we'll fall in line with the right league. It's easy enough to accept the movie's themes — of fairness and loyalty to yourself and to your country, of putting yourself on the line for what you believe in — but this soft-centered comedy fails even to remind us that the fear of a blacklist still exists.

THE MUSIC MAKERS

'Listeners Need to Learn Too'

Memories of a keen disappointment he suffered at the age of 15 have brought pianist-teacher Edward Parker to include in his busy schedule a lecture-recital program.

He recalls attending a recital by a much-acclaimed pianist of the period — William Kapell — and coming away from the affair bewildered and let down because he had not recognized any of the works performed and had no idea as to how he should have listened.

PARKER
. . . pianist, teacher

"I knew Kapell played brilliantly but beyond that the concert meant little to me," he says.

This initiated thoughts, subsequently expanded by his teaching career, that young musicians should have the opportunity of attending a wide variety of lecture-recitals before approaching formal recitals by the famous artists of their time.

"Comprehension of reading and arithmetic is learned from the ground up," Parker says; "why not music too?"

A gold medalist of the Royal Conservatory for all Canada at 25 and holder of a Master of Music degree from the University of Washington in piano performance since 1973, Parker taught at UBC for 10 years and had a private studio in Vancouver for 25 years before "the fine healthy spirit of co-operation and sharing" at Victoria Conservatory of Music lured him to that institution's faculty a year ago.

Parker believes that it is as important to cultivate listeners as performers. "It takes effort and a great deal of listening experience to become an appreciative listener," he says.

Preparation of Soil Important

By JACK BEASTALL

The success of next year's garden will be directly related to the attention we give the soil now and the protection we provide for it over winter.

The vegetables we gathered and enjoyed, the flowers that pleased our senses of sight and smell, the grass we religiously watered, fed, and cut all made their growth by extracting nutrients from the soil.

Each carrot, rose bloom and blade of grass represents a certain number of square inches of raw material removed from the soil's stockpile.

This raw material is called humus. When the correct amount of sand, clay and humus are present we have a good garden soil.

It is the humus that is broken down by the micro-organisms in the soil and changed to chemicals the plants can use to make growth. At the end of each growing season the stock of humus has been severely depleted.

Opposed to this, the amount of sand and clay has not changed appreciably. Some grains have broken down and released their minerals which the plants have appreciated, but the soil as a whole now consists of a mugh higher percentage of sand and clay and a very low percentage of humus.

When this condition is allowed to continue year after year the soil slowly reverts to its sand and clay base, the plants become weakened, more prone to attacks from disease and pests, and gardening problems increase rapidly.

A common statement by home gardeners is that their soil is no good and never was any good.

GARDENING
jack beastall

This is offered as a valid excuse for a multitude of gardening problems considered as being the natural woes of a gardener, and ignores the basic fact that the gardener has failed to replenish the food supplies on which the plants draw to make growth.

Any gardener can convert a poor soil into a reasonably good garden loam in five years by increasing the humus content. When humus is applied each year slightly in excess of the amounts consumed by the plants, a good garden soil is maintained.

A garden can be compared to a factory which converts raw materials into a usable product. If the supply of raw materials is not maintained the assembly lines will slow to a stop.

What is humus and where can it be obtained?

In the wild, humus is the leaves and twigs that are discarded by plants and the manure of animals which frequent the region. The plant population is any piece of wild ground is controlled to some degree by the amount of humus provided in this way.

The plants grown in the home garden are not a natural balanced population, but are collected from all over the world and often contribute little or nothing to the good of the community. A collection of garden plants can rob the soil and give little in return.

Humus, as used in a garden, is also discarded plants and plant parts plus the manures from domesticated animals, usually referred to as barnyard and stable manure.

The discarded plants and parts of plants are turned into humus by the process of composting, which is a means of rapidly breaking down the cellulose content and producing a product usable by plants in the shortest possible time.

The barnyard manure from cows and the stable manure from horses is purchased from local sources and frequently mixed with the plant wastes to provide larger quantities and a better product.

In coastal areas another valuable source of humus, minerals, and chemicals, is seaweed, of which the variety commonly called kelp is plentiful following the first November gales.

Kelp, or any other seaweed, can be added to the wastes and animal manures in the compost heap, or spread directly on the surface of the soil.

This valuable source of humus and plant foods, free for the collecting, is bypassed by many home gardeners who believe it contains salt that could harm plants. Although it is a plant growing in salt water its salt content is no greater than that of fish which live in the same water. The only salt present is in the small amount of water on the surface of the plants.

Humus can be applied to the garden at any convenient time, either as a surface mulch to protect the soil or by direct incorporation into the present soil.

The method chosen by the gardener will be, to some extent, linked with the local climate and the micro-climates of the garden. In this area we have heavy winter rains and dry summers.

Experiments conducted some 50 years ago showed that pounding raindrops over an extended period of time can damage soil almost as effectively as walking on it, or working it, when saturated with moisture. The raindrops hit with enough force to displace the grains of soil anl separate the small particles of humus which float away on the surface water. When drying occurs, the surface is baked hard. Soils suffering most from rain damage are those basically clay in structure.

Knowing this, we can obtain double value from the humus we add to our gardens by spreading it on the surface now before the heavy fall rains start. This surface covering can be lightly mixed with the top six inches of soil in spring.

After the vegetables have been sown and the beds and borders cleaned in spring, another layer on the surface will add more nutrients and protect the soil from the heat of the sun and from loss of moisture during the dry months of summer. In this way, we protect and improve the soil.

Cow (barnyard) manure is considered best for clay soils. Horse manure is lighter and contains less bulk. Bird manures (chicken, pigeon, turkey) are high in nitrogen and best mixed in small quantities with the garden wastes in the compost heap.

Fresh manure is used only as a winter soil cover for areas containing no plants or roots, or for incorporation with wastes for composting. Old manure (one year) can be spread on the surface of beds or borders and vacant ground. It is not advisable to use a manure mulch on beds or borders planted with spring flowering bulbs in this climate, nor should any covering, manure or compost be put over the crowns of herbaceous perennials.

Very old manure (two to three years) has many uses and is safe for beds, borders (with above exceptions), vacant soil and for potting and planting mixtures. It adds the much-needed humus minus the high nitrogen which forces soft growth that can be damaged in a January cold spell.

The effect of humus on a clay soil is to improve its mechanical texture, permit a better circulation of air by holding open the otherwise closely packed grains, thereby increasing drainage and improving root growth, and lessens the amount of artificial watering needed in summer to maintain plant growth.

In sandy soils humus fills the spaces between the loose grains, thus holding available plant nutrients that would normally leach away, and greatly increases the moisture holding capacity, both of which benefit the plants being grown.

Plants are the product of soil and soil is humus added to sand or clay. Without humus, a garden can have many problems.

WORK FOR WEEK

Outdoor garden work is only a pleasure at this season if warm clothing is worn. Keep back of the neck warm, and hands and feet. The rest takes care of itself with exercise.

Removal of finished annuals, cutting down of last perennials to flower and pulling out finished vegetable plants — all this goes to compost heap for making soil for next year.

Continue to put poinsettia plants into unbroken darkness from dusk until dawn, then into warm light window each day.

Potted cyclamens, started into new growth at end of August, will be growing well. Buds will soon show if kept in light window without too much heat.

In cold (unheated) greenhouse, bulbs in pots and planters will come along slowly and produce flowers in late winter. The advantage is that wind and rain damage is avoided and full beauty of the blooms is enjoyed under cover.

Don't forget to use those late fall vegetables — kale, swiss chard, curly endive, corn salad and perhaps the last of the summer lettuce. Damp, cool weather is no excuse for wasting them.

Bottle on Ferry Fingerprinted

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — The FBI is testing for fingerprints on a nearly empty half-pint whiskey bottle found in the wheelhouse of the ferryboat George Prince, involved in a crash that killed more than 70 persons.

The discovery of the bottle was revealed Thursday, the fifth day of a hearing before a four-member coast guard board of officers into the Oct. 20 collision of the ferry and the 664-foot, 22,000-ton Norwegian tanker Frosta.

MAJOR DIG PLANNED

GRIMSBY, Ont. (CP) — While digging for arrowheads in an open field west of Centennial Park, Grimsby town employee Lawson Allez found the apparent remains of an Indian encampment and burial ground dating back to 1650.

Just a few inches below the surface, Mr. Allez found a human skull, various fragments of human bone, beads, seven French felling axes, six copper kettles, a complete conch shell and two pendants made from conch.

Mr Allez notified the Royal Ontario Museum (ROM) in Toronto which is organizing a major dig on the Niagara Peninsula site owned by Hamilton developer Ed Robinson.

Dr. Walter Kenyon, curator of Canadian archeology for the ROM said: "It is an exciting find. God only knows what will happen when we start digging; there is a good chance of finding more of what we have already found."

While Dr. Kenyon was talking, two archeologists found more beads and bone fragments.

Dr. Kenyon said the area, which is about one-quarter of a mile below the Niagara escarpment, was populated for centuries by Seneca and Neutral Indians who traded extensively with the French and speculated that the remains are probably from one of those tribes.

Before any conclusions are made concerning the artifacts, they will have to be analysed more closely, said Dr. Kenyon.

Dr. Kenyon, who will supervise the project, has two concerns: to clear the deck for the developer who has a subdivision proposal for the site and to ensure that anything of historic importance will be placed in the public domain.

White—Zaccarelli

A beautiful summer day, good friends and warm relatives marked the wedding day of Wendy Ann Zaccarelli and Guy William White, when they joined hands to become man and wife. Shortly before 6 p.m. on August 21, 1976, Reverend Philip D. Ross, who officiated at the double-ring ceremony, enlightened the guests at Esquimalt United Church by speaking of the meaning of marriage. The groom, handsome in his chocolate brown tuxedo waited at the altar which was decorated with baskets of white mums, peach gladiolas, baby's breath and white satin ribbons; candelabras flanked each side. Then, with her arm resting upon her father's, Wendy was escorted down the aisle wearing her wedding gown of silk jersey with a long sweeping train. It also featured a sculptured neckline, empire waistline, and long Bishop sleeves all adorned with Guipure lace appliques. A wreath of silk flowers held a waistlength veil of illusion tulle with silk embroidered scalloped edges. Her only jewellery was an heirloom ring borrowed from her maternal grandmother, and pearl earrings from her sister. She carried a cascade bouquet of white carnations, coral rosebuds andbaby's breath Wendy was attended by her sister Cheryl Reda as matron of honour, and Joanne Eddy and Kathy Nygaard as bridesmaids. They were attired in identical floor length gowns of peach jersey with short knit jackets and matching picture hats. They carried bouquets of peach tipped daisies and baby's breath. The groom was attended by Al Orton as best man and the guests were ushered by Eric Ponsford and Clint White, the groom's brother. They wore chocolate brown suits with peach coloured shirts. After the picture taking by Kent Wong at Government/House grounds, a buffet reception was held at the Tally-Ho Travelodge where guests were greeted by the bride's and groom's families. The bride's mother looked lovely in her choice of a sleeveless champagne toned gown of knit jersey with a lacey knit jacket and a peach toned corsage. The groom's mother chose an orange sherbert print gown with matching jacket, and a gardenia corsage. The toast to the bride was made by Mrs. Charlotte Ness, an old friend of Wendy and her family. After an evening of dancing to Canned Music, the couple left a honeymoon motoring through the Interior and are now residing in Victoria.

Crump—Holroyd

St. Aidan's United Church was the setting for the June 19th, 1976 wedding of Marie, daughter of Harold and Carolyn Holroyd, and Bernie, son of Bernie and Helen Crump. Rev. Allan officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, Marie chose a gown of white silk jersey. Applique white lace flowers outlined the neck and Empire waistline. The leaf-patterned headpiece held a mid-length veil sprinkled with pearls. Marie's only jewellery was diamond earrings (gift of the groom) and she carried a lace hankie which her aunt Mrs. Ian Holroyd had carried at her wedding. Maid of honour, Lynn Nightingale, wore a peach coloured jersey gown. Bridesmaids, Cathy Land and Lori Holroyd, wore peach printed pastel gowns, all with identical capped sleeves, high belted styles. Flower girl Pam Vagels wore the same print, only trimmed with lace and short puff sleeves. The bridal attendants carried bouquets of roses and carnations to match their gowns. Mrs. Holroyd and Mrs. Crump chose gowns of green and turquoise, respectively. Bernie and best man Ken Eng, wore beige tuxedos. Ushers Kevin Metcalfe, Gurdave Sundher and Scott Holroyd wore light blue tuxedos.

Mr. Ian Holroyd proposed the toast to his niece. Following a buffet dinner and dancing to Denny's at the S.U.B., the couple honeymooned in Washington. Marie and Bernie are now residing in Vancouver, where Bernie is attending UBC.

Trade Your Yard On UVic Condominium

Are you thinking of giving up your yard and moving into a condominium but are hesitant because of a slow market? Do not despair! My vendor has a lovely 2-bedroom corner suite by the University and will trade for a 3-bedroom home in good condition. He just loves the hard work and frustration of yard maintenance. Is he crazy? Perhaps he is. You'd better call today before he comes to his senses.

WOWEE!!
I can't believe my eyes!
This ANTIQUE AUCTION looks fantastic
VILLAGE AUCTION Sure knows how to please!

Everytime we plan our Victoria Antique Auction sale we try to do something for you that is just a little bit different. This time we have asked for the help of a professional critic — that's him above — who will give you the low-downs and the high-ups of this sale.

Now before I turn this space over to Sam, I would like to remind you all that the opinions expressed are his and his alone. He has told me that antiques are his favorite subject and he just loves auctioning and if you like his report, he will be only too pleased to make a return visit — at no additional cost, thank goodness!!

Over to you, Sam!

"Well, I think the nicest thing in the whole sale is the magnificent columned oak display serving sideboard and I am just mad about the set of six carved oak spoonback diners. The Victorian cranberry glass finger lamp is nice but then I'm a pushover for cranberry glass.

You people just always have such beautiful brass beds!! Where do you get them all? And how do you polish them up so beautifully? All a person ever has to do is take it home, set it up, put on the bedding and relax.

Say, how do you think I would look in one of those black silk top hats? I would like to have one with the original leather case, you understand, and I know I can choose from two sizes. The satin birch wardrobe, dresser and washstand combination looks very colonial and is it ever built strong! It would probably last someone another fifty or sixty years . . . even with children!!!

Hey! you know this isn't the easiest job in the world — after all I don't even know what you want to hear about. I might even be boring you to tears. Rather than take that chance I think I will just list everything and let you decide.

. . . Rural oak case cottage wall clock, late Victorian upholstered Mr. and Mrs. Parlor chairs, large copper jardiniere, many plant stands and occasional tables, super-duper mahogany dresser, mantle and shelf clocks, duchess dressers, wall mirrors, a varied assortment of framed pictures and paintings — AW! what the heck with this — you know they always have a great display and I could rave on and on — why don't you do the sensible thing and come out and have a look for yourself?

There are two jam-packed days and they go something like this—

TUESDAY — November 2nd, at 7:30 p.m.

16% Gas Price Hike Urged

Residential natural gas consumers in British Columbia will face an increase of 16 per cent if the provincial government adopts recommendations released Friday by the B.C. Energy Commission.

Energy Minister Jack Davis released the report without commenting on its recommendations. But he said the government's position on prices would be made public by the middle of November.

The report is the result of the commission's findings from its 1976 petroleum and natural gas price and incentives hearings, held earlier this year.

The report recommends higher prices for natural gas producers, a move which would cost about $37 million a year on current levels of consumption.

The energy commission also urges a reduction in provincial royalties on oil production, which would amount to about $7.5 million a year.

The commission recommends a field price for so-called old gas, currently worth 35 cents a thousand cubic feet (MCF), to 40 cents effect Monday and 60 cents on Jan. 1.

For new gas now worth 55 cents per MCF, the commission recommends an increase to 75 cents on Monday and to 85 cents from Jan. 1.

Old gas and oil is that in production before Nov. 1, 1974, and new gas and oil is anything in production after that date.

The commission recommends a reduction of the royalty rate on old oil to 40.4 per cent from 46.9 per cent and on new oil to 21.9 per cent from 28.1 per cent.

And it recommends an increase of 24 cents per MCF in the wholesale price of natural gas.

The commission says adoption of the higher suggested field prices in the absence of corresponding wholesale price increases would lead to direct provincial subsidy to natural gas consumers.

Tenders will be received by the undersigned for various improvements and additions to specific areas at 1205 Bay Street and 2409 Chambers Street. Closing date November 5, 1976, unless other arrangements have been made by the undersigned.

Further details may be obtained from: Maintenance Supervisor, B.C.H.M.C., No: 202-3400 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C.

Hydro Lays Off 29 Employees

Twenty-nine employees of the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority's gas division in Victoria received lay-off notices Friday, effective March 31.

A Hydro spokesman said another four people in the division will also terminate their employment at that time but these are long-time employees reaching retirement age.

The spokesman said those being laid off are mostly outside workers belonging to the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Also being laid off, however, are office staff belonging to the Office and Technical Employees Union, as well as supervisory and professional staff who are members of the Management and Professional Employees Society.

The spokesman said, "Both management and the three unions will work together to make sure they (the terminated employees) are made aware of job opportunities when they become available in other divisions and other localities."

The employees losing their jobs, the spokesman said, were fully aware that this would happen.

They had been taken on to work on a gas system renewal program that was to last five years, beginning in 1972 and ending March 31, 1977.

While there could be no guarantees that new jobs will be found for the 29 employees being fired, the spokesman said every effort will be made to keep them posted when job opportunities in Hydro become available.

Fishing Licenced

TOKYO (AFP) — Japanese fishermen will operate in the Canadian 200-mile fishing zone under licence from the Canadian government starting in January, it was agreed here this week.

Japan opens fishery talks with the United States and will rejoin Canada and the U.S. in further talks next month.

Japan, which opposes the unilateral proclamation of 200-mile fishing jurisdiction by any foreign country, agreed to a Canadian proposal on condition that Japanese fishing operations continue on a licensed basis without an intergovernmental fishery accord.

Canada will enforce the 200-mile zone from Jan. 1.

No fishery quota was discussed during the negotiations here because of differing estimates of fish resources off the Canadian coasts. Officials said Japan caught about 19,000 tons of fish in Canadian waters last year.

The two governments have agreed to conclude talks on quotas by the end of this year, officials said.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Two persons were fined Friday in Victoria Provincial Court for illegally claiming unemployment insurance benefits.

Kurt D. Balmer, 18, of 2537 Beacon Ave., Sidney, was fined $600 after pleading guilty to eight counts on a charge of obtaining unemployment insurance benefits while he was attending school.

The offences occurred betweeen September and December last year. While attending school, Balmer claimed a total of $848 in benefits, of which $840 is still outstanding and must be paid back.

Thomas A. Jamieson, 26, of 1418 Hillside, was fined $375 after pleading guilty to five counts of a similar charge.

Jamieson claimed a total $664 in benefits while working. He told court he felt entitled to the money because on a previous occasion he didn't get benefits although, he claimed, he was entitled to them.

Judge William Ostler told Jamieson it wasn't just a case of feeling entitled to claim money, but of making false statements.

"The Unemployment Insurance Commission may well still owe you money," Ostler said, adding that making false statements wasn't the way to get it.

A 46-year-old Victoria man was sentenced to four months in a forestry camp after pleading guilty to charges of mischief and obtaining transportation by fraudulent means.

Thomas G. Gage of 3515 Quadra smashed the windshield of a car with a shotgun blast last May. When questioned by police at the time, Gage said he had "taken care of the car" which was tearing around at night.

Ostler said the proper sentence for Gage would be six months, but he was giving consideration to time the accused man had already spent in custody.

The other charge involved a cheque drawn on a closed account. The cheque in the amount of $25 was presented to Air West by Gage to pay for an air fare from Vancouver to Victoria.

The long arm of the law caught up Friday with a San Diego man, three years after he committed an offence in Victoria.

John D. Ringer, 27, was sentenced to 20 days in jail after pleading guilty to a charge of illegally using someone else's credit card to buy more than $600 worth of goods.

Ringer will be deported to the U.S. after serving his sentence.

Court was told that Ringer bought gasoline, tires and other automobile parts with a credit card that didn't belong to him. He later left Canada for two years to live in Mexico and Jamaica.

Ringer returned to Canada to sell a home he owned in Hope. He was arrested recently for driving without insurance.

Court was told that Ringer was anxious to return to the U.S. because his mother was critically ill. Court was also told that he had been offered a job as a teacher in San Diego.

Mrs. Margaret Barker, 50, of 790 Wilson, was fined $300 after being found guilty of impaired driving. She was also placed on eight months probation and ordered to do 70 hours of community work.

Canada Leading Series

OTTAWA (CP) — The Old Man and The Kid will have a chance today to wrap up a win for Canada in the opening round of Davis Cup tennis play.

Dale Power, The Old Man, and Greg Halder, The Kid, will team up in a doubles match against John Antonus and Leo Rolle, representing the Commonwealth-Caribbean team.

Canada has 2-0 lead in matches in the best-of-five Davis Cup round on the strength of wins Friday night by Jim Boyce of Toronto and Rejean Genois of Quebec City.

Even if Canada wins today, two singles matches scheduled Sunday will be played, part of Davis Cup rules. If Canada wins, it will play Mexico's powerful Davis Cup squad in Ottawa next weekend.

Boyce defeated Antonus 6-2, 6-2, 7-5 and Genois beat Rolle 6-4, 6-3, 3-6, 6-1.

"Davis Cup puts a lot more pressure on you than ordinary tournaments because you're playing for your own country," Genois said.

Non-playing captain Lorne Main of Dartmouth, N.S., said there "wasn't an easy set in the whole bunch out there tonight."

He said he had Genois and Boyce play in a special practice game Thursday to get them ready. "They were really pumped up out there tonight."

He said he decided to combine Power and Halder because Power's previous Davis Cup experience would steady Halder, a newcomer to Davis Cup. "Halder has the biggest serve on our team and he really handles himself well on the court.' And Dale, who has been playing well this year, will be a steadying influence."

MP Deplores B.C. Shipping Subsidy Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — Hundreds of jobs will be lost in northwest B.C., an area of high unemployment, when the federal government ends a transportation subsidy to a Vancouver shipping company in three days, Stuart Legatt (NDP-New Westminster) told the Commons Thursday.

Leggatt said the cutting of the subsidy to Northland Navigation would also leave 16 communities in northwest B.C. without any effective means of communication.

He asked that the subsidy to the company be extended and that a report prepared for the Canadian transport commission be tabled.

The report says an upgrading of existing equipment and service could lead to a quick elimination of present subsidies, Leggatt said.

His motion was defeated by Liberal MPs.

Builders Back System

HARRISON (CP) — A political action committee headed by Merve Miller of Prince George, immediate past chairman of British Columbia chapter of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada, plans to spread the message of free enterprise home builders.

Gary Sanini, of Vancouver, who replaced Miller as chairman at HUDAC's 10th annual regional conference Friday, said the committee will try to counter the actions of senior government leaders who some members say are engaged in "a calculated and conscious erosion of the free market system.

"It is imperative that we make every effort to ensure the defeat of politicians who see their mandate that of radical constraint, restraining the role of private enterprise as a fundamental force in our society," Santini said.

Victoria MDs Elect Head

Dr. Norman Bailey was elected president of the Victoria Medical Society at its recent annual meeting.

Other officers are Dr. J. Douglas Critchley, vice-president; Dr. Patricia Johnston, honorary secretary-treasurer and doctors Michael Bassett, John L. Campbell and Frank Perera, directors.

The society represents about 350 doctors in Greater Victoria. Retiring president is Dr. Alastair Baird.

Arctic Ice Acts Like Rock, Photos from Satellite Reveal

Satellite photos of the Western Arctic have given scientists a new image of how the ice behaves.

Two Victoria researchers with the Institute of Ocean Sciences at Patricia Bay have prepared a paper they think will influence work of the Canada-U.S. group known as the Arctic Ice Joint Experiment.

"I think we've jolted them into thinking in a different light," said Dr. R. E. Thomson, of the ocean physics division, who worked on the new theory with Dr. John Marko, of the Beaufort Sea study group.

Thomson said they have shown evidence that the great ice mantle previously regarded as a plastic layer behaves almost exactly like rock under physical stresses.

Remote sensing disclosed "fantastic criss-cross patterns about 100 miles apart," causing 1,000-kilometre leads in the ice, Thomson said.

The scientific paper entitled Rectilinear Leads and Internal Motion in the Ice Pack of the Western Arctic Ocean suggests that strong Arctic winds compact the ice to the point where the built-up pressure finally fractures it in much the same way as geological stress fractures rock.

Thomson and Marko published an earlier theory dealing with the same subject in 1975, but the current paper replaces that one. It is being prepared for publication by the Journal of Geophysical Research.

In collaboration with Dr. Robert Stewart, director-general of ocean and aquatic scieces for the department of environment, Thomson has published two other papers this year dealing with turbulence and ocean dynamics.

The first — Potential Vorticity in the Ocean — puts thinking "back to square one," Thomson said, at the same time agreeing there will be scientific argument opposing it.

He said the theory runs counter to very good work done by a scientist at the University of Washington, Dr. Pierre Welander, published in 1973, which equated total ocean turbulence with the wind energy factor.

Involved mathematical work by Stewart and Thomson, however, discloses that Welander omitted the lift force of wind when making his calculations and when that is taken into consideration the theory is "shot down."

The U.S. scientific journal, Dynamics of atmospheres and Oceans, has published the Thomson-Stewart paper.

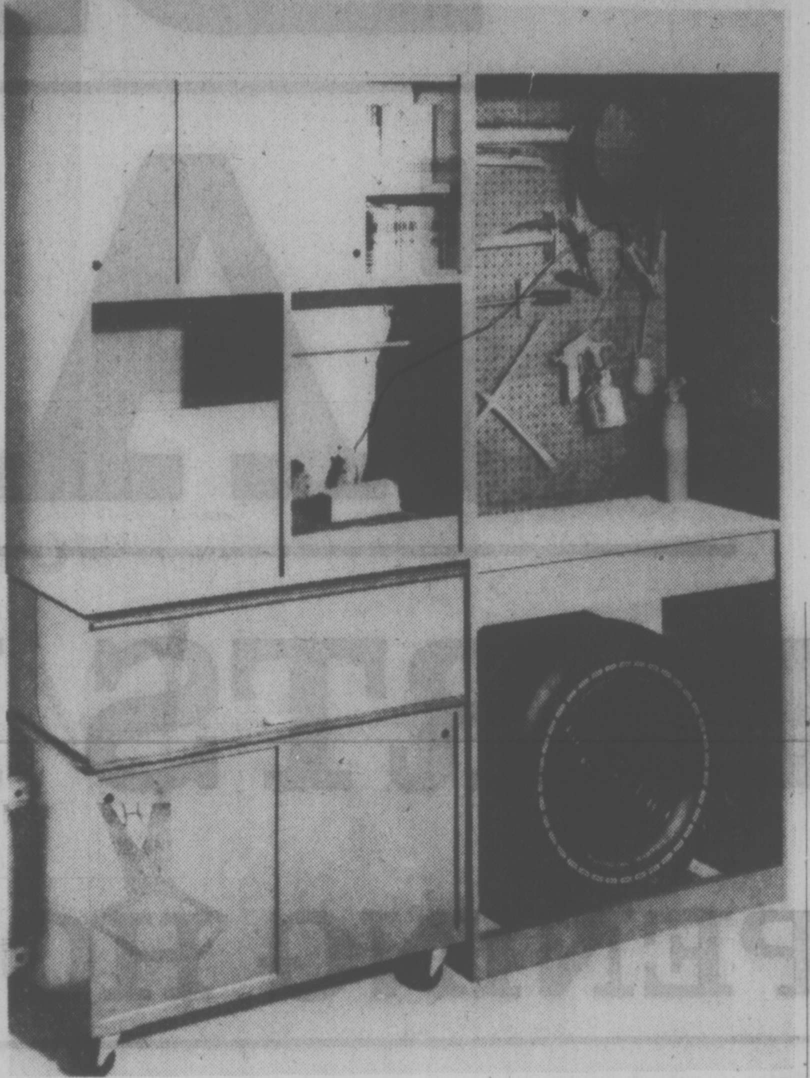
The third paper, published in the Proceedings of the Royal Society, Cambridge, confirms a 44-year-old theory by the German physicist Ludwig Prandtl, noted for his work in aeronautics and fluid dynamics.

In what Thomson described as "convoluted mathematics," he and Stewart state the definitive putdown on the theory of G. I. Taylor — "the founding father of fluid mechanics" — whose work in England in 1915 stated vorticity and momentum can be mixed or diffused in theory.

Thomson said Prandtl was right because by conserving momentum, vorticity is conserved automatically, whereas Taylor's theory, while conserving vorticity, failed in general to consider momentum.

One of the referees who examined the work concluded that "It drives the stake through the heart of a theory that has been securely nailed in its coffin."

In other words, Thomson said, he and Stewart have made it clear no scientists should adhere to Taylor's theory any more.



AUTO SUPPLIES STORAGE UNIT

Here's a project that will bring all your auto parts and equipment together, if you decide to build all the components.

Because it's a three-part unit, you can build what you need the most first, then add the other parts later. Overall dimensions are 6 feet wide by 7 feet high and 18 inches deep.

The photograph illustrates the wall-hung cabinet, designed to hold oil, anti-freeze, and cleanup equipment. On the right is storage for tires and tune-up gear. The other component is a tool cart, complete with flip-up lid that serves as a work top when open. And if you're more mechanic than cabinetmaker, don't give it a thought — the construntion is all butt jointed ¾-inch plywood.

Finish by sealing with a primer, then paint with enamel.

Air Canada Cuts Fares To Bahamas

MONTREAL (UPI) — Air fares to the Bahamas will be lowered by more than 30 per cent for vacationers this winter, Air Canada announced today.

Travellers will pay only $149 from Montreal and $221 from Toronto compared to present minimum of $240 and $221, representing savings of $91 and $82 respectively.

The service will be at off-peak hours, leaving Canada before 11 p.m. EST and returning after 7 a.m.

Air Canada said it first introduced a similar service last year from Montreal and Toronto to Tampa and Miami and passengers willing to fly at those hours were rewarded with much lower fares.

DEFIANT WORKER SET AFIRE

PORT COLBORNE, Ont. (CP) — A union machinst who did not participate with members of the United Steelworkers of America in the national work stoppage Oct. 14 was set on fire Wednesday during a coffee break, police said Friday.

Victor Zacharjasz, 35, employed by Barber Hydraulic Turbine, was in hospital Friday with severe burns suffered when someone put a rag in his back pocket and set it on fire, police said.

Union officials were not available for comment.

Zacharjasz said in an interview a fellow worker threatened Oct. 15 to put him in hospital because he had stayed on the job during the protest. Nothing happened until Wednesday, he said.

Zacharjasz said he had been cleaning machines and his clothes were smeared with inflammable cleaning fluid when he was set on fire.

Vancouver firemen carry incendiary bomb from Eaton's

Burning Bomb Snuffed In Vancouver Eaton's

VANCOUVER (CP) — An Eaton's business office employee foiled an apparent bomb plot in the large downtown store Friday night — and all because the lights went out in his office.

The employee, Fred Cackette, was puzzled when the light failed. He went to a fifth floor electrical switch room to investigate and found what appeared to be a bomb with a burning fuse.

Police said he stomped it out and raised an immediate alarm.

Within minutes, store authorites evacuated the building of shoppers and staff.

Police believe the bomb scare was probably created by someone who was angry at the store.

Insp. Doug Westover discounted an earlier theory that four incendiary bombs found on the fifth floor of the store were a diversion for a robbery attempt.

"He went to a great deal of trouble he spent a great deal of time on it," the inspector said today.

The drama began around the store's 9 p.m. closing time as shoppers were leaving.

Cackett, a senior store employee, found a burning paper fuse leading to a plastic shopping bag.

Inside the shopping bag, police found a gasoline-filled plastic container. The bag had been placed beneath an electrical switch box, and next to the gas container was another shopping bag containing more gas, an oil substance and a quantity of black powder — probably poured from shotgun shells.

"The idea was that the gas would ignite and touch off the other package," Westover said. "It was basically an incendiary device."

45-MILE CHASE IN WRONG LANE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lewis Arsenault, 53, of Vancouver was charged Friday with impaired driving and dangerous driving following a 45-mile chase down the wrong side of the Trans Canada Highway at high speeds in the Fraser Valley.

The chase ended Thursday night with the driver in jail, dents to three cars and frazzled nerves for scores of other drivers.

RCMP at Chilliwack said they started getting phone calls from motorists at 8:40 p.m. complaining that there was a car heading west in the eastbound lanes of the divided highway.

A patrol car from Unit-B freeway patrol at Abbotsford spotted the wrong-way car crossing Sumas Prairie and paced it at about 80 mph.

The police car stayed in the westbound lane as far as the 232nd street overpass in Langley, then crossed into the eastbound lane and stayed close behind the offending car.

The westbound car sideswiped an eastbound car at 264th Street and bounced off a police car at a roadblock set up by the Burnaby-based Unit B freeway patrol at the Langley-Surrey border.

The driver stopped voluntarily at 184th street, two miles west of the roadblock.

Prison System Failure—Fox

VANCOUVER (CP)—Solicitor-General Francis Fox said Friday that the present correctional system in Canada is a failure, and warned offenders that in the future it will be up to them to earn their own way out of prison.

Speaking at the opening session of a two-day symposium on Canadian prisons at the University of B.C., Fox said it is apparent the present system, based on the concept of rehabilitation, has not worked.

In the future, instead of trying to prescribe appropriate treatment to rehabilitate offenders, the corrections system will expect prisoners to make use of available opportunities to earn their own way out, he said.

Under what he described as the "opportunities model," Fox said that if offenders "want to get back out on the streets, they'll have to take advantage of the opportunities we're giving them."

"The opportunities principle . . . is based on the assumption that the offender has the capacity to make choices and that he is willing to accept his obiligations and responsibilities."

Fox said that while there have been dramatic changes in the correction system over the past 15 years, these have not reduced recidivism, the crime rate, or the number of offenders in correctional institutions.

U.S. Steps In On Geneva Talks

Times News Services

GENEVA — U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger sent William Schaufele, his chief troubleshooter for Africa, to Geneva today to step in should the talks on Rhodesia's future begin to falter.

But black delegates rejected in advance Kissinger's peace package for Rhodesia designed to ease the country into majority rule within two years and, in public statements at least, scorned Schaufele's mediation bid.

Schaufele, assistant secretary of state for African affairs, said on arrival he was in Geneva as an "observer," but added, "I expect to see most, if not all the participants" in the talks as well as the British conference chairman, U.N. ambassador Ivor Richard.

Richard was meeting privately today with Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith, who has stated repeatedly that he will not budge from the Kissinger blueprint.

The British diplomat also was scheduled to see black leaders, who have vowed to take power by war if they don't get it at the conference table.

Black delegates said they saw little point in Schaufele's trip to Geneva.

Joshua Nkomo, leader of the moderate wing of the African National Council, said as far as he was concerned, Schaufele "is a tourist."

All four black nationalist delgations have rejected the Kissinger proposals, saying they want black control in one year, at the most and accused Smith's regime of committing atrocities against blacks in fighting with nationalist guerrillas.

In a curt, one-minute speech, Smith denounced the accusations as lies. His foreign minister, Pieter Van der Byl, called a news conference to detail countercharges that black guerrillas were committing atrocities against both blacks and whites in Rhodesia.

Smith told reporters he thought there was a possibility he would return to Rhodesia "if only for a few days" but could quinly return if necessary.

"I've got the feeling for the next week or so we may be sitting here twiddling our thumbs," he said. "If this is so, I think I will probably go back home if only for a few days.

"This in no way means I am turning my back on the conference, as I will leave a full delegation . . . and can return at the drop of a hat," Smith said.

Meanwhile, the people back in Rhodesia are more immediately concerned about the implications of the rapidly intensifying guerrilla war — which gets just as much coverage in the local media as the peace talks.

Major incursions by insurgents of the Zimbabwe Peoples Army (ZIPA), based mainly in neighboring Mozambique, have almost doubled since Sept. 24, when Smith announced that his government would surrender power to Rhodesia's black majority under the settlement proposed by Kissinger.

Government officials estimate that 3,000 guerrillas are now operating within the troubled southern African territory, double the estimate of last July. And at least another 5,000 are being trained in Mozambique camps.

Military communiques announcing guerrilla ambushes, attacks on farms, road minings and atrocities against local tribesmen are now issued almost daily, compared wih weekly announcements just three months ago.

Guard Stabbed

JOHANNESBERG (AP) — Blacks stabbed and shot a white guard in the black township of Guguletu outside Cape Town on Friday night during racial violence in isolated areas of South Africa, police reported today.

The gaurd, stationed outside government offices, was reported in critical condition. Police said his own gun was used on him.

At the neighboring black township of Langa, police said they fired on a crowd of 1,000 students who began stoning police vehicles. There were not reports of casualties.

In Soweto, the huge black township outside Johannesburg, police said youths threw a fire bomb through the window of a beer hall, setting the building on fire.

Elsewhere in South Africa, two blacks were killed and two wounded when police opened fire on rioters in an African township near Dundee, about 180 miles southeast of Pretoria.

Fishboat Blast Kills Man

A fishing boat moored at the Government wharf in Tofino exploded and burned early today and the body of a man was recovered later.

The fire, which broke out about 2:40 a.m., was fought by volunteer firemen and RCMP. The victim, thought to be the sole occupant aboard the boat, was not identified in initial reports from the tiny community north of Long Beach on Vancouver Island's west coast.

BCGEU Calls For Mediator

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Government Employees' Union applied Friday to the labor relations board for a mediator to try to resolve a wage dispute with the provincial government.

John Fryer, BCGEU general secretary, said the application was made after the union broke off negotiations with the Government Employee Relations Bureau (GERB).

Fryer said negotiations ended after the bureau formally withdrew an earlier government pay offer of $45 a month, effective last Oct. 1.

The offer, made last August, was turned down by the union's 33,000 members by a vote of 61.5 per cent.

Fryer said that after the rejection vote, union negotiators pressed for an increase in the $45 offer and for a retroactive pay increase as compensation for the periods BCGEU components have worked without pay agreements.

He said management rejected both union proposals.

Under the Public Service Labor Relations Act any mediator appointed by the labor relations board has 10 days to try to resolve the dispute.

If mediation fails, the dispute goes to binding arbitration if both union and management agree.

Shopping Probe Requested

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The Anti-Inflation Board has been asked to launch an investigation into the situation which makes it profitable for Canadians to cross the American border to do their grocery shopping.

Herb Gray (PC — Windsor West) wrote Jean-Luc Pepin, chairman of the board, drawing his attention to press reports that the prices of food and other items are so much lower in Bellingham and Detroit that it pays the people of Vancouver, Windsor to cross the border to shop.

He has heard too that Winnipeggers drive south to go shopping.

He also noted that Statistics Canada had reported recently that Vancouver had the highest increase in prices of any of the cities in Canada it surveys regularly.

He wrote the chairman to request, first that the board launch an immediate investigation into the situation which is attracting Canadians to do their regular weekly shopping over the border. He suggested the higher prices in this country may involve breaches of the anti-inflation act and its regulations.

Gray said if the board found there were infractions of the act it should take immediate corrective action to ensure that lower prices for the products in question are made available to Canadian consumers.

He also asked the board to use its authority to make a general investigation of the situation looking into the practices of both large companies under its administration and those not large enough to come under the mandatory controls.

Gray asked further that the board make known to the public the results of its findings. In this way it would be able to use the impact of public opinion to help correct the situation.

CLOCKS BACK

British Columbians get an extra hour of sleep tonight when the clocks are turned back, ending Daylight Saving Time. Officially, the clocks go back at 2 a.m. Sunday.

Freedom's Worth 5c

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial Judge Les Bewley showed his frustration over freedom given penitentiary prisoners Friday by fining a parolee a nickel or two days in jail for being unlawfully at large.

Then he dug into his own pocket to pay Richard Herbert's fine.

Herbert, who has a criminal record dating back 14 years and ranging from burglary to assault, was sentenced in 1971 to six years for two Vancouver robberies, skipping bail and fraud.

Court was told that Herbert was paroled from the B.C. Penitentiary to a downtown correctional centre on Jan. 9. On Jan. 22 he was released for one hour and 15 minutes for lunch and didn't turn up for three days.

Herbert, who was due for full release Oct. 6, pleaded he had a bad back that affected his legs and couldn't get back.

"Legally, I must find you guilty but it is quite obvious from the facts of this case that someone in the parole service decided that you should be at large from the penitentiary to which a judge had sentenced you to six years," Judge Bewley said.

"It is also very apparent no one bothered to appeal the sentence of the original trial judge, to allow this man to be free . . . ridiculous as it may seem the Penitentiary Act deems a person to be legally in custody even though he is free to walk unsupervised around town."

Herbert had an ear-to-ear grin as he left the courtroom.

"Naturally we will have to appeal the decision," said prosecutor Kerr Clark.

Loaded Tanker Wandered Off Victoria

SEATTLE (AP) — A loaded oil tanker manned by a Chinese crew that could not understand English wandered around the Strait of Juan de Fuca last week, a British Columbia ship's pilot says.

Capt. Hill Wilson said the Panamanian tanker White Peony went in and out of shipping lanes, at times inbound on lanes normally reserved for traffic outbound from Washington inland waters.

The White Peony carried 24.5 million gallons of crude oil.

Wilson said he overheard discussions between the White Peony and the U.S. Coast Guard, and their attempts to communicate.

The ship reportedly missed the Ediz Hook light at Port Angeles, where pilots usually board eastbound vessels.

The White Peony was finally stopped five miles short of Dungeness and a pilot boarded and led her to the Atlantic Richfield refinery dock at Cherry Point, near Bellingham.

Wilson was aboard a Norwegian freighter and kept a brief log on the White Peony's movements. He reported the incident to the B.C. Secretariat of Environment and Land Use.

The U.S. Coast Guard said Friday it was "completely unaware" the ship was headed the wrong direction at times.

The coast guard chief of staff in Seattle, Capt. Stuart Beckwith, said he had been advised the situation was not serious. He said, "It sounded like sort of a foulup that seemed to get back on the track. I don't know what this Captain Wilson's concerns are."

The coast guard said shipping lanes are not recognized by international law.

Wilson said the traffic system "is a bit useless." He said that in a "crunch" the system does not work.

Wilson also said the White Peony's crewmen were putting up warning lights near Port Angeles, and should have had the lights in place at the mouth of the Strait, 60 miles earlier.

Halloween . . . action time for witches like Mrs. Jean Kozocari

WITCH IS SURPRISING

Not an Ounce of Mean in Jean

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Jean Kozocari destroys the notion witches are sinister toothless old hags with nothing but meanness in their hearts.

She's the opposite of all that. Yet she insists she's a witch.

You'd think she'd have a tough time making friends, getting married, or having a family. But no. She leads a seemingly normal life in the heart of Oak Bay.

"A happy housewife," she calls herself. Of course, it helps to have an understanding husband. And her four children, aged 10 to 26, well, they accept the fact their mother's perhaps a little unusual.

About the only complaint is from her oldest boy. He tends to have difficulty keeping a steady girlfriend.

"The girls seem to scatter when he tells them his mother is a witch," she chuckles.

Fortyish, short, jovial and as round as Buddah, Mrs. Kozocari has been a witch for as long as she can remember.

Her grandfather was one. Her great grandmother was one too, and Mrs. Kozocari says she can trace witches in her family all the way back to 1430 in England and France.

(Men are witches in her cult; warlock is an Americanism she disdains).

To Mrs. Kozocari, witchcraft is a religion, with deep roots in pre-Christian tradition and beliefs.

"It means craft of the wise," she says. "On the other hand some say it's the craft of the wicked. It all depends on whose camp you're in."

She believes witches can control and manipulate the forces of nature . . . but only if the end result is noble.

"Our responsibility is to suppress evil and accentuate good."

★

Next to the summer festival of Lammas on Aug. 1, there is no more important occasion in a witch's life than Halloween.

It's the time of year when the feminine principle in nature turns over her control to the male element for the winter months, she says.

It's a highly psychic period, the one time in the year when the gate between this world and the next is not manned. An ideal moment to contact the dead.

This year is expecially important because it marks the 50th anniversary of Houdini's death.

She says many covens (gatherings of witches) will be trying to communicate with the great magician.

Like all witches, Mrs. Kozocari says, she has special abilities. She can prophesize, conjure spirits, exorcise demons and remove spells. She can cast spells too, but anyone can do that, she adds, since a spell is just a curse.

Most of her work is devoted to teaching parapsychology and helping people haunted by ghosts or poltergeists.

Because of her growing reputation (she once received a postcard from Japan addressed simply: Jean Kozocari, Witch, Canada, she is in constant demand.

At her home at 2051 Hampshire, she carries out her study and research. From the outside the house looks like any other on the block, except maybe the paint — blood-red, her favorite color next to black.

Inside, the decor is — different.

There's Hoitai, for instance, a porcelain Buddah. It once belonged to a Victoria area policeman who was having terrible luck. Mrs. Kozocari concluded th cause was Hoitai. So she brought the malevalent Buddah into her home and conducted various "cleansings." Now he's almost pleasant, she says.

Then there's a small wooden cross with a crude legless figure carved on its face.

"It's a stake," she says picking it up off a window ledge. "From Transylvannia. It should have gone through a vampire's heart."

Of course she has a Siamese cat too. Asmodeus. In witch lore Asmodeus is the male demon of lust and sexuality.

Mrs. Kozocari is unusual in that she publicly declares she's a witch. Most don't.

"I'm the only loudmouth in the group," she quips.

★

Whether it has been her influence or an indication of a larger trend, witchcraft is enjoying a surge in popularity.

Between 1850 and 1975 there were never more than five covens in Victoria, says Mrs. Kozocari who moved here from Ontario in 1961.

Now there are dozens of covens. Most comprise only two or three members and none have more than 13 members, the optimum number in forming a witch's circle.

She estimates there are about 80 practising witches on the Island.

Mrs. Kozocari will begin Halloween just like most other mothers in Victoria, handing out treats to children.

Shortly before 10 p.m., however, she'll pack up her things and head out to the secret meeting place of her coven.

There she'll don her witch's robes and sit and meditate and converse in low tones with the group, three other women and five men.

At precisely 1:20 a.m. Monday, the moment determined by the position of the stars as being most propitious, the witches will form a circle nine feet in diameter. Joining hands they will begin a series of ritual chants and dances.

The object is to raise a "cone of energy." Once achieved, the group will direct it to whatever effect they had decided upon earlier in the evening. It could be to help someone who needs healing. It could be to remove spells. It could be to care for someone who has died during the year.

The circle may last half an hour. It could take all night.

When the energy is spent and their mission done, the group will depart their separate ways. The drive home won't be by broomstick, but by car.

Also, such is the way with modern-day witches.

Guy Will Win Says Schibli

The president of the Victoria Labor Council said today he thinks Len Guy will win by a 2 to 1 margin in the bitter battle for the top labor post in B.C. two weeks from now.

But John Schibli said the council's three delegates go to the annual convention of the B.C. Federation of Labor in Vancouver Nov. 15 to 19 without instructions on how to vote.

Guy, current federation secretary, is up for re-election and is opposed by Art Kube, regional director of education for the Canadian Labor Congress.

Kube is drawing support from two of the province's major unions, the International Woodworkers of America and the B.C. Government Employees Union. Together they represent about a third of the federation's 320,000 members.

IWA regional president Jack Munro said earlier there is a serious rift in the provincial trade union movement and it is going to have to suffer a little bloodletting on the leadership issue.

Schibli said it would have been extremely difficult to get a consensus from local labor council delegates on which man to support and could have generated a split within the organization.

In such situations, the general policy is to leave to each delegate the voting choice after hearing candidates, he said. About 500 voting delegates are expected at the convention.

Secretary Larry Ryan is the sole delegate financed by the council. Expenses of the other two delegates, Linda Baker from the B.C. Government Employees Union and Elgin "Scotty" Neish from the United Fishermen's Union, are paid by their respective unions.

Schibli said delegates usually meet with their own union caucus and may be instructed how to vote. But in the final analysis the choice is theirs because voting is by secret ballot.

The provincial labor leadership issue was raised only briefly in a labor council meeting and not debated after it was explained the question is one for individual unions to decide, he added.

The Victoria council has about 120 unions with a total membership of 18,000 affiliated with it.

Schibli, who is also president of the Victoria local of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, said it is all but certain the building trades will support the incumbent, Guy.

FISHNET MISHAP DELAYS JETFOIL

The pilot of the Boeing jetfoil Flying Princess and some luckless Victoria fisherman both learned a lesson Friday.

For the fisherman the lesson was you don't drop your nets in the path of the jetfoil.

For the pilot, it was that the screen over the vessel's intake valve won't stop a net from being sucked in and gumming up the works.

The craft had just begun its return trip to Seattle when at about 4:30 p.m. just outside the Inner Harbor it suddenly slowed down.

It managed to make it back under its own power to the dock where divers were sent down.

They found a net wound up inside the intake valve. (The Flying Princess is propelled by sucking water in and rapidly pushing it out).

It took a couple of hours to get the net unwound and by 8 p.m. the jetfoil finally left.

Passengers didn't mind the wait. They were given complimentary food and bar service on the two-hour run home to Seattle.

End to Bentick 'Bombing' Urged by Shoreline Expert

The department of national defence should stop despoiling Bentick Island, one of the most attractive islands in the capital region, an expert on shoreline management has urged.

"What's the sense of blowing craters on a beautiful island" said Wolf Bauer. "There's no need for that today — not with all those long-range missiles and modern weapons."

He was referring to Bentick Island, situated off the coast of Metchosin between Becher Bay and Peddar Bay. It is owned by DND and has been used for grenade training by the armed services.

Comparing the island to Discovery and Chatham off Oak Bay, he said Bentick, as well as adjacent DND shoreline property, is "a most important resource area."

"Bentick and the surrounding DND property should be retained as recreational area — as a park," he said. "The entire complexis one of the most scenic areas in the capital region and one which is close to the urban centre."

Bauer, a Seattle engineer who was engaged by the Capital Regional Distritc to make a study on shoreline management, was speaking at a public meeting on a shoreresource study he carried out this summer between Wolf Island and Fort Rodd Hill.

He told the meeting that the road at the beginning of Esquimalt Spit and running along the shoreline to the gravel pit should be closed.

The entire area could be developed as a picnic site to tie in with the Colberg spit, he said.

"Trees could be planted here and there and you would have a beautiful shoreline park."

He warned if the road is not closed, rubble and rocks will have to be dumped along the beach to protect the thoroughfare from being eroded away.

"So you will end up with just another rubble beach just to keep a road intact — a road which is not necessary." he said.

Juveniles Held In Break-Ins

Oak Bay police said today they have apprehended two juvenile boys age 13 and 14 who may be responsible for as many as 13 break-ins in Victoria and Oak Bay over the past three months.

The two, both from Victoria, are expected to appear in Family Court sometime next week.

A police spokesman said more than $1,500 worth of stolen goods has been recovered following a lengthy investigation.

The goods include: A portable engine stolen from B.C. Hydro, an engine stripped from a motorcycle at Royal Jubilee Hospital parking lot, a stereo set and tapes taken from a truck parked at Horwood Motors Ltd., 810 Johnson, clothes and a camera stolen from a truck parked on Cedar Hill Crossroads near K-Mart, five bicycles from various locations in Oak Bay, a quantity of liquor, fishing equipment and a portable rubber dinghy stolen from boats moored at Oak Bay Marina, a jigsaw from Banks Street school, tools from two construction sites, a steering wheel off an Austin-Healey parked at the Oak Bay Recreation Centre, a lawnmower and wheelbarrow taken from the rear of 2140 Cadboro Bay, tools from 1430 Newport and 10 fire extinguishers from five different Oak Bay apartment blocks.

Police also said that in a separate case a 17-year-old Victoria youth and a 16-year-old Vancouver boy have been jointly charged with two break-ins on Oct. 28 in homes at 595 Monterey and 963 Transit Road.

Union VP Quits In Frustration

The vice-president of the inside workers' union at City Hall, Friday announced his resignation from his union job saying the frustrations in routine dealings with the city personnel department are intolerable.

Rick Doyle, 32, who works in the data processing division, was elected vice-president of Local 388 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees a year ago.

His decision to step down has been building up "an awful long time," he said, because "it is pretty impossible to do the job we were elected to do."

Doyle cited two examples of the delays the union has experienced.

Last Aug. 3, the local sought a ruling on whether one employee was entitled to a cost-of-living allowance. Nearly three months later, and after several meetings with the city manager, the city's answer went out in a letter today.

The second case involved a query on whether two parking meter service men were entitled to free uniform laundering. The union submitted the request sevent weeks ago and has only just been informed that the city agrees to pick up the laundry tab.

Again, he said, several meetings costing "hundreds of bucks" were necessary to thrash out the matter.

"It's a battle to get a simple answer to a simple queson," Doyle said.

Sometimes the only way to extract an answer seems to be to file a grievance, but that should not be necessary and in any case the procedure takes too long.

Blood Drive 'Disappointing'

A two-week campaign for blood donors in Greater Victoria ended Friday with a warning that local hospitals would be in trouble without donors from elsewhere in the province.

Red Cross spokesman Gerry Savage said today the 10 days of clinics yielding 2,156 donors. Minimum target had been 2,500.

The final clinic Friday, at Royal Jubilee Hospital, produced 165 donors, which Savage termed "disappointing."

All blood donated at clinics throughout the province during the year is distributed to hospitals through the Red Cross blood bank in Vancouver.

At the end of September hospitals in the Capital district had used 1,300 more units of blood than local donors had supplied, he said.

"We are dragging. We needed 2,500 to pick up the slack."

Last year for the first time in 20 years donors in Greater Victoria contributed almost 13,000 units of blood and matched the needs of hospitals in the district.

So far this year there have been about 10,000 units of blood donated. There will be 10 more days of clinics this year, five in November and another five in December.

Elderly Woman Killed

An elderly woman pedestrian died in Royal Jubilee Hospital Friday night five hours after being struck by a car at Richmond and Haultain.

Victoria police said Anna Moller Walker, 82, of 305-1928 Lee, was crossing the intersection when she was hit by a car driven by Norman Mitchell Bamford, 69, of 671 Linkleas.

The mishap occurred at 3:56 p.m.

Police said Mrs. Walker was the seventh person to die in traffic accidents in the city so far this year. Last year there were two fatalities and in 1974 there were 13.

16% Gas Price Hike Urged

Residential natural gas consumers in British Columbia will face an increase of 16 per cent if the provincial government adopts recommendations released Friday by the B.C. Energy Commission.

Energy Minister Jack Davis released the report without commenting on its recommendations. But he said the government's position on prices would be made public by the middle of November.

The report is the result of the commission's findings from its 1976 petroleum and natural gas price and incentives hearings, held earlier this year.

The report recommends higher prices for natural gas producers, a move which would cost about $37 million a year on current levels of consumption.

The energy commission also urges a reduction in provincial royalties on oil production, which would amount to about $7.5 million a year.

The commission recommends a field price for so-called old gas, currently worth 35 cents a thousand cubic feet (MCF), to 40 cents effect Monday and 60 cents on Jan. 1.

For new gas now worth 55 cents per MCF, the commission recommends an increase to 75 cents on Monday and to 85 cents from Jan. 1.

Old gas and oil is that in production before Nov. 1, 1974, and new gas and oil is anything in production after that date.

The commission recommends a reduction of the royalty rate on old oil to 40.4 per cent from 46.9 per cent and on new oil to 21.9 per cent from 28.1 per cent.

And it recommends an increase of 24 cents per MCF in the wholesale price of natural gas.

The commission says adoption of the higher suggested field prices in the absence of corresponding wholesale price increases would lead to direct provincial subsidy to natural gas consumers.

Tenders will be received by the undersigned for various improvements and additions to specific areas at 1205 Bay Street and 2409 Chambers Street. Closing date November 5, 1976, unless other arrangements have been made by the undersigned.

Hydro Lays Off 29 Employees

Twenty-nine employees of the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority's gas division in Victoria received lay-off notices Friday, effective March 31.

A Hydro spokesman said another four people in the division will also terminate their employment at that time but these are long-time employees reaching retirement age.

The spokesman said those being laid off are mostly outside workers belonging to the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Also being laid off, however, are office staff belonging to the Office and Technical Employees Union, as well as supervisory and professional staff who are members of the Management and Professional Employees Society.

The spokesman said, "Both management and the three unions will work together to make sure they (the terminated employees) are made aware of job opportunities when they become available in other divisions and other localities."

The employees losing their jobs, the spokesman said, were fully aware that this would happen.

They had been taken on to work on a gas system renewal program that was to last five years, beginning in 1972 and ending March 31, 1977.

While there could be no guarantees that new jobs will be found for the 29 employees being fired, the spokesman said every effort will be made to keep them posted when job opportunities in Hydro become available.

RUSSIAN SIGNAL DISRUPTIVE

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — A mysterious, high-powered radio signal emanating from the Soviet Union is severely disrupting international telecommunications around the world, a Federal Communications Commission (FCC) official said Friday.

King Hall, a senior FCC monitoring official, said the jamming of other signals was apparently not intentional.

He said FCC direction-finding equipment has placed the signal as coming from the eastern shore of the Baltic Sea.

Hall said the FCC does not know what the signal was being used for, but added: "It's my guess it's an experimental type of radio signal. It's a pulse transmission, the kind they could bounce off the ionosphere to measure ionospheric density or to determine reflection angles."

The FCC official said the signal had first been noticed in early July and since then the commission has received hundreds of complaints.

GAS-SAVER AD BRINGS FINE OF $500

TORONTO (CP) — K-Tel International Ltd. of Manitoba was fined $500 in provincial court Friday for false advertising in a September, 1974, ad that claimed a gas-saving device increased mileage 10 to 30 per cent in most cars.

A plea of guilty under the Combines Investigation Act was entered on behalf of the company.

Prosecutor Chris McNaught said tests conducted by the National Research Council showed that the device provided only marginal gains in gas economy.

WOWEE!!

I can't believe my eyes!
This ANTIQUE AUCTION looks fantastic
VILLAGE AUCTION Sure knows how to please!

Everytime we plan our Victoria Antique Auction sale we try to do something for you that is just a little bit different. This time we have asked for the help of a professional critic — that's him above — who will give you the low-downs and the high-ups of this sale.

Now before I turn this space over to Sam, I would like to remind you all that the opinions expressed are his and his alone. He has told me that antiques are his favorite subject and he just loves auctioning and if you like his report, he will be only too pleased to make a return visit — at no additional cost, thank goodness!!

Over to you, Sam!

"Well, I think the nicest thing in the whole sale is the magnificent columned oak display serving sideboard and I am just mad about the set of six carved oak spoonback diners. The Victorian cranberry glass finger lamp is nice but then I'm a pushover for cranberry glass.

You people just always have such beautiful brass beds!! Where do you get them all? And how do you polish them up so beautifully? All a person ever has to do is take it home, set it up, put on the bedding and relax.

Say, how do you think I would look in one of those black silk top hats? I would like to have one with the original leather case, you understand, and I know I can choose from two sizes. The satin birch wardrobe, dresser and washstand combination looks very colonial and is it ever built strong! It would probably last someone another fifty or sixty years . . . even with children!!!

Hey! you know this isn't the easiest job in the world — after all I don't even know what you want to hear about. I might even be boring you to tears. Rather than take that chance I think I will just list everything and let you decide.

. . . Rural oak case cottage wall clock, late Victorian upholstered Mr. and Mrs. Parlor chairs, large copper jardiniere, many plant stands and occasional tables, super-duper mahogany dresser, mantle and shelf clocks, duchess dressers, wall mirrors, a varied assortment of framed pictures and paintings — AW! what the heck with this — you know they always have a great display and I could rave on and on — why don't you do the sensible thing and come out and have a look for yourself?

There are two jam-packed days and they go something like this—

16% Gas Price Hike Urged

Residential natural gas consumers in British Columbia will face an increase of 16 per cent if the provincial government adopts recommendations released Friday by the B.C. Energy Commission.

Energy Minister Jack Davis released the report without commenting on its recommendations. But he said the government's position on prices would be made public by the middle of November.

The report is the result of the commission's findings from its 1976 petroleum and natural gas price and incentives hearings, held earlier this year.

The report recommends higher prices for natural gas producers, a move which would cost about $37 million a year on current levels of consumption.

The energy commission also urges a reduction in provincial royalties on oil production, which would amount to about $7.5 million a year.

The commission recommends a field price for so-called old gas, currently worth 35 cents a thousand cubic feet (MCF), to 40 cents effect Monday and 60 cents on Jan. 1.

For new gas now worth 55 cents per MCF, the commission recommends an increase to 75 cents on Monday and to 85 cents from Jan. 1.

Old gas and oil is that in production before Nov. 1, 1974, and new gas and oil is anything in production after that date.

The commission recommends a reduction of the royalty rate on old oil to 40.4 per cent from 46.9 per cent and on new oil to 21.9 per cent from 28.1 per cent.

And it recommends an increase of 24 cents per MCF in the wholesale price of natural gas.

The commission says adoption of the higher suggested field prices in the absence of corresponding wholesale price increases would lead to direct provincial subsidy to natural gas consumers.

Tenders will be received by the undersigned for various improvements and additions to specific areas at 1205 Bay Street and 2409 Chambers Street. Closing date November 5, 1976, unless other arrangements have been made by the undersigned.

Further details may be obtained from: Maintenance Supervisor, B.C.H.M.C., No. 202-3400 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C.

Hydro Lays Off 29 Employees

Twenty-nine employees of the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority's gas division in Victoria received lay-off notices Friday, effective March 31.

A Hydro spokesman said another four people in the division will also terminate their employment at that time but these are long-time employees reaching retirement age.

The spokesman said those being laid off are mostly outside workers belonging to the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Also being laid off, however, are office staff belonging to the Office and Technical Employees Union, as well as supervisory and professional staff who are members of the Management and Professional Employees Society.

The spokesman said, "Both management and the three unions will work together to make sure they (the terminated employees) are made aware of job opportunities when they become available in other divisions and other localities."

The employees losing their jobs, the spokesman said, were fully aware that this would happen.

They had been taken on to work on a gas system renewal program that was to last five years, beginning in 1972 and ending March 31, 1977.

While there could be no guarantees that new jobs will be found for the 29 employees being fired, the spokesman said every effort will be made to keep them posted when job opportunities in Hydro become available.

Censorship Claimed

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — The Foreign Press Association in Israel has accused the government of imposing "Indian-style censorship," and "arbitrary plug-pulling on telex transmissions.

Ars Nova Program Sunday

At Victoria Art Gallery, Sinday, the Ars Nova Ensemble of Victoria will present a program designed around French music and letters up to the period of the revolution.

The intention of this series of Sunday afternoon concerts is to offer music and poetry and other readings with an emphasis on the less familiar.

The duo suite of Jacques Aubert and works by Francois Devienne, Xavier Lefevre and Jean-Marie Leclair will be performed and there will be readings ranging from Voltaire to Andre Chenier.

The Ars Nova group consists of Larry de la Haye, clarinet; Edward Norman, piano; Stacey Boal, violin and recorder, and James Kennedy flute and recorder.

The concert begins at 3 p.m. and there is no admission charge.

Ban Lifted

CAPE TOWN (Reuter) — South Africa censors have lifted a 20-year-old ban on importation of Ebony, a U.S. magazine for blacks said.

WOWEE!!

I can't believe my eyes!

This ANTIQUE AUCTION looks fantastic

VILLAGE AUCTION Sure knows how to please!

Everytime we plan our Victoria Antique Auction sale we try to do something for you that is just a little bit different. This time we have asked for the help of a professional critic — that's him above — who will give you the low-downs and the high-ups of this sale.

Now before I turn this space over to Sam, I would like to remind you all that the opinions expressed are his and his alone. He has told me that antiques are his favorite subject and he just loves auctioning and if you like his report, he will be only too pleased to make a return visit — at no additional cost, thank goodness!!

Over to you, Sam!

"Well, I think the nicest thing in the whole sale is the magnificent columned oak display serving sideboard and I am just mad about the set of six carved oak spoonback diners. The Victorian cranberry glass finger lamp is nice but then I'm a pushover for cranberry glass.

You people just always have such beautiful brass beds!! Where do you get them all? And how do you polish them up so beautifully? All a person ever has to do is take it home, set it up, put on the bedding and relax.

Say, how do you think I would look in one of those black silk top hats? I would like to have one with the original leather case, you understand, and I know I can choose from two sizes. The satin birch wardrobe, dresser and washstand combination looks very colonial and is it ever built strong! It would probably last someone another fifty or sixty years . . . even with children!!!

Hey! you know this isn't the easiest job in the world — after all I don't even know what you want to hear about. I might even be boring you to tears. Rather than take that chance I think I will just list everything and let you decide.

. . . Rural oak case cottage wall clock, late Victorian upholstered Mr. and Mrs. Parlor chairs, large copper jardiniere, many plant stands and occasional tables, super-duper mahogany dresser, mantle and shelf clocks, duchess dressers, wall mirrors, a varied assortment of framed pictures and paintings — AW! what the heck with this — you know they always have a great display and I could rave on and on — why don't you do the sensible thing and come out and have a look for yourself?

There are two jam-packed days and they go something like this—
